Council agenda full Thursday

Kay Parker named as Interim City Manager

By DAWN HANKINS
dhankins@t-g.com

When Shelbyville City Council meets 6 p.m. Thursday, a business item set for approval is for administrators to correspond with Shelbyville-Bedford County Chamber of Commerce officials. While that seems to be a reasonable request, Council is about to reject the Chamber's recent offer for the City to purchase its current building on South Cannon Boulevard for $75,000.

The second part of that motion, which was discussed during Council's recent study session, is to schedule a meeting at the Chamber building and conduct a walk-through of the facility.

During its discussion recently, Council advised that Chamber Executive Director Lacey Deeds has plans to "retire." In a discussion last week with the T-G, Deeds, a Florida business executive having come to Shelbyville last year for the position, confirmed that she is "retiring."

"Loved the opportunity to work and live in this amazing community," said Deeds. "The Chamber is making great progress with marketing our businesses and community. Looking forward to spending time with my husband and enjoying life together."

Seeking new city manager

Council is set to approve a city manager profile, which will include a City limit residency requirement and a salary range from $90,000 to $145,000. Applications will be received until 4 p.m., May 31.

Maria Castellano

Community student makes HOSA history

Castellano first to serve as state officer

T-G STAFF REPORT

Bedford County Schools announced Wednesday that Community High School (CHS) student Maria Castellano was voted the 2022-2023 president-elect for Tennessee HOSA-Future Health Professionals, marking the first time for BCS to have an officer serving at the HOSA state level.

Castellano was elected by voting delegates during the 2022 Tennessee HOSA State Leadership Conference. As a candidate, Castellano prepared and presented a speech as well as conducted a campaign during the conference.

She said one of her favorite aspects about being in HOSA is working with other HOSA members as well as others to have success. "I love helping people and that's one of the things I get to do as just a chapter president. I love working with Mrs. [Kaycee] Martin closely. It's very helpful. I feel like one of the things I really enjoy doing is getting out and helping the public and going to do things with them."

Castellano said she wants to attend the University of Tennessee-Knoxville and major in pre-med with the intent to become a pediatric surgeon. "I love working with kids and... the things that I've learned about, there's just this desire to want to help people and to help change the world with saving lives," Castellano said. She has a grandmother and a couple aunts who are CNAs, which has served as inspiration to go into the medical field.

But Castellano said the biggest key to her success is following through. "It's like this door was open for me and I had set my mind that I wanted to do this. So, I had this mindset that I was going to go in and come out a success."

Day to day, she said what keeps her going is the desire to do better every day. Outside of HOSA, Castellano is in the National Honors Society and is a worship leader at Gateway Church.

"One thing I always say to myself is don't think you can't do it because you always can. You just have to put your mind to it," she said.

"As her teacher and HOSA advisor, I am extremely proud of Maria's accomplishments," said CHS teacher Kaycee Martin. "I've watched her grow tremendously as a student and as a leader since her first off-campus HOSA event in October 2021. Maria's involvement since then has been instrumental in developing her future as a state officer."

Principal Robert Ralston said, "Community High School is pleased with all of the students' success at the conference and especially Maria's selection as the president-elect. We are excited to see what other opportunities will be found for HOSA through Maria and with the leadership of Mrs. Martin. I am very pleased with Maria's accomplishment and what this means for our school and our county as well."

Other CHS HOSA student placements at the state conference included Joshua Eslick, top 5 recognition in Academic Testing Center –Leadership; Emily Kirkman, top 5 recognition in Academic Testing Center –Occupational Health and Safety; Morgan McCool, 4th place in the Research Poster event; Jessica Lawwell, top 5 recognition in the HOSA Happenings event.

Mariupol mayor says siege has killed more than 10K civilians

LVIV, Ukraine (AP) — The mayor of the Ukrainian port city of Mariupol said Monday that more than 10,000 civilians have died in the Russian siege of his city, and that the death toll could surpass 20,000, with corpses that were "carpeted through the streets."

Speaking by phone Monday to The Associated Press, Mayor Vadym Boychenko also said Russian forces brought mobile cremation equipment to the city to dispose of the bodies, and he accused Russian forces of refusing to allow humanitarian convoys into the city in an attempt to conceal the carnage.

Russian forces have taken many bodies to a huge shopping center where there are storage facilities and refrigerators, Boychenko said.

"Mobile crematoriums have arrived in the form of trucks: You open it, and there is a pipe inside and these bodies are burned," he said.

The mayor's comments emerged as Russia claimed that it destroyed several Ukrainian air-defense systems in what appeared to be a renewed push to gain air superiority and take out weapons Kyiv has described as crucial ahead of an expected broad new offensive in the east.

In one strike, Moscow said it hit four S-300 launchers near the central city of Dnipro that had been provided by a European country it did not name. Slovakia gave Ukraine just such a system last week but denieda it had been destroyed. Russia previously reported two strikes on similar systems in other places.

The failure to win full control of Ukraine's skies has hampered Moscow's ability to provide air cover for troops on the ground, limiting their advances and likely exposing them to greater losses.

With their offensive in many parts of the country thwarted, Russian forces have relied increasingly on bombarding cities — a strategy that has left many urban areas flattened and killed thousands of people.

Ukrainian authorities accuse Russian forces of committing atrocities, including a massacre in the town of Bucha, outside Kyiv, airstrikes on hospitals and a missile attack that killed at least 57 people last week at a train station.

In Bucha on Monday, the work of exhuming bodies from a mass grave in a churchyard resumed.

Galyna Feoktistova waited for hours in the cold and rain in hopes of identifying her 50-year-old son, who was shot and killed more than a month ago, but eventually she went home for some warmth. "He's still there," her surviving son, Andriy, said.

In Mariupol, about 120,000 civilians are in dire need of food, water, warmth and communications, the mayor said.

Only those residents who have passed the Russian "filtration camps" are released from the city, Boychenko said. He said improvised prisons were organized for those who did not pass the "filtering," while at least 33,000 were taken to Russia or to separatist territory in Ukraine.

Meanwhile, the U.N. children's agency said that nearly two-thirds of all Ukrainian children have fled their homes in the six weeks since Russia's invasion began, and the United Nations has verified that 142 children have been killed and 229 injured, though the actual numbers are likely much higher.

Elsewhere, Austrian Chancellor Karl Nehammer said he met Monday with Russian President Vladimir Putin in Moscow for talks that were "very direct, open and tough."

In a statement released by his office, Nehammer said his primary message to Putin was "that this war needs to end, because in war both sides can only lose." Nehammer said he also raised the issue of war crimes committed by the Russian military and said those responsible "will be held to account."

Austria is a member of the European Union and has backed the 27-nation bloc's sanctions against Russia, though it so far has opposed cutting off deliveries of Russian gas. The country is militarily neutral and is not a member of NATO.

In other developments, the head of the separatist rebel government in Donetsk said Ukrainian forces have lost control of the port area of Mariupol.

"Regarding the port of Mariupol, it is now under our control," Denis Pushilin, president of the Donetsk People's Republic, told Russian state television, according to Russian news agencies. The claim could not immediately be confirmed.

The mayor said fighting continues.

"It is difficult, but our heroic military holds on," Boychenko said. "There are fights in the port. Yesterday, our heroic warriors knocked out several positions of equipment and, accordingly, rebuffed the infantry.

Russia has appointed a seasoned general to lead its renewed push in the eastern Donbas region, where Moscow-backed separatists have been battling Ukrainian forces since 2014 and have declared independent states. Both sides are digging in for what could be a devastating war of attrition.

Russian forces will likely try to encircle the Donbas region from the north and the south as well as the east, said retired British Gen. Richard Barrons, co-chair of the U.K.-based strategic consulting firm Universal Defence & Security Solutions.

The ground in that part of Ukraine is flatter, more open and less wooded — so the Ukrainian ambush tactics used around Kiev may be less successful, Barrons said.

"As to the outcome, it's finely balanced right now," Barrons said. If the Russians learned from their previous failures, concentrated more force, connected their air force to ground forces better and improved their logistics, "then they might start to overwhelm the Ukrainian positions eventually, although I still think it would be a battle of enormous attrition."

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy pleaded for more Western aid, saying his forces need heavier firepower. In a video address to South Korean lawmakers on Monday, Zelenskyy specifically requested equipment that can shoot down Russian missiles.

But those armaments could increasingly come under attack as Russia looks to shift the balance in the 6-week-old war.

Russian Defense Ministry spokesman Maj. Gen. Igor Konashenkov said the military used cruise missiles to destroy the four launchers Sunday on the southern outskirts of Dnipro. He said the military also hit such systems in the Mykolaiv and Kharkiv regions.

The Russian claims could not be independently verified.

The Pentagon said it had seen no evidence to support Russia's claims. A senior U.S. defense official said Russia did conduct an airstrike Sunday on the airport in Dnipro, destroying some equipment, but the official said the U.S. has seen no indication that an air-defense system was knocked out.

Lubica Janikova, spokeswoman for Slovakia's prime minister, denied Monday that the S-300 system it sent Ukraine had been destroyed. She said any other claim is not true.

Questions remain about the ability of depleted and demoralized Russian forces to conquer much ground after their advance on Kyiv was repelled by determined Ukrainian defenders.

Britain's Defense Ministry said Monday that Ukraine has already beaten back several assaults by Russian forces in the eastern Donetsk and Luhansk regions — which make up the Donbas — resulting in the destruction of Russian tanks, vehicles and artillery.

Western military analysts say Russia's assault increasingly is focusing on an arc of territory stretching from Kharkiv, Ukraine's second-largest city, in the north, to Kherson in the south.

A residential area in Kharkiv was struck by incoming fire on Monday afternoon. Associated Press journalists saw firefighters putting out the fire and checking for victims following the attack, and saw that at least five people were killed, including a child.

Oleh Synyehubov, the regional governor of Kharkiv, said earlier Monday that Russian shelling had killed 11 people over the last 24 hours.

Ceiling fan operation

Hints from Heloise

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have been in HVAC service for 42 years, and while your instructions regarding ceiling fan operation are correct for spaces that do not incorporate central heating and air conditioning, homes built in the last 50+ years with such systems should run the ceiling fans to work with, not against, the airflow from the registers.

If the registers are in the floor and are blowing up the walls, then the ceiling fans should be pushing the air down the center at all times to not work against the HVAC system. Likewise, if the registers are in the ceiling, the fans should be pushing the air up at all times for the same reason. Either way, the air is circulated between floor and ceiling.

I also recommend not using ceiling fans during air-conditioning season if the ceilings are higher than 8 feet. Leave that warm air up there rather than use energy to cool it; instead, use floor fans to circulate air.

Air circulation is always a good thing, and HVAC systems are designed to circulate continuously by turning the fan to "ON" at the thermostat. The fan in my system hasn't shut off in 20 years. -- Dennis S., Hutchinson, Kansas

WATER USAGE

Dear Heloise: I use a plastic tub when I wash my dishes in my kitchen sink all of the time. That way I keep as much water as is feasible and use it on my roses and other outside plants in need of a little "extra." Some dish soaps are 100% biodegradable, and the plants don't seem to mind at all. I use a clean cup to pour water over the utensils and rinse out that side of the sink.

I haven't used my dishwasher for anything but canning supplies storage for 15 years. There are only two of us, and frankly, 90% of my dishwashing is for the lids that I use for the canned cat food for my pets. -- Vicki P., via email

GROWING TOMATOES

Dear Heloise: In the spring and summer, when I try to grow tomatoes, the plants often get a problem that indicates they are low on calcium.

When I am through with a bottle of milk or any fortified plant milk, I rinse it out. But instead of dumping the calcium-enriched water, I put it in the soil around the tomatoes plants.

I think this conserves a resource, is less wasteful and actually gives the tomatoes needed calcium. I think it works, as well.

Thank you for many useful hints in your column. -- Rachel S. , Fayetteville, Arkansas

Preserving HISTORY

Dear Heloise: Recently a reader wrote in your column about the importance of labeling pictures -- people, places and, if possible, dates. As a member of our local historical society, I would like to stress the importance of this. And also dating and noting the source for any newspaper articles.

We rely heavily on clippings, pictures and personal papers to create a record of everyday life. -- L. Brown, Fair Haven, Vermont

SCOOPING ICE CREAM

Dear Heloise: This is how I scoop ice cream. No hour prep time. No weird bagged ice cream.

After removing any gold foil or similar tops, just put the ice cream container in the microwave and nuke it on high for 10 seconds. The result is perfect for scooping consistency. -- R.S. McAllister, San Antonio, Texas

Send a money-saving or timesaving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001, or you can fax it to 1-210-HELOISE or email it to Heloise@Heloise.com. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

AG NOTES

By John Teague
UT/TSU Extension

SCHOLARSHIP

The Middle Tennessee Beef Producers, our local cattlemen and cattlewomen association, sponsors a scholarship for county seniors who are going to college with a major in agriculture or a related field, or those who will attend a trade school with the same connection to agriculture.

The scholarship applications are available at all of the county high schools, either with the guidance counselors or with the agriculture science teachers or at the Extension office. These applications are due by close of business April 15, and they can be dropped off here at the Extension office or mailed to 2105 Midland Road, Shelbyville 37160. If you have any questions, contact me at 931-684-5971 or jteague1@utk.edu

MASTER BEE KEEPING SERIES

I mentioned this program last week, and it has proven to be so popular I wanted to pass it on again. The UT Master Bee Keeper series is once again on the schedule. All of the details are on her website shown here. Registration is now open - the link is on Dr. Jennifer Tsuruda's website: https://epp.tennessee.edu/masterbee There will also be a post on the webpage for Entomology and Plant Pathology at EPP's FB page

Dr. Tsuruda is fairly new to our state, but has been a bee expert for some time in other states. We are glad to have her here in Tennessee.

All of the scheduled classes are the Basic class due to overwhelming demand. Advanced classes may be scheduled in the future but we need to make sure those starting out receive research-based information so they will be successful and ready for the Advanced class. Please note that the Basic class is a Master Beekeeping course and counts for Tennessee Ag Enhancement Program.

This is a direct registration process, so all questions and details should be directed to Dr. Tsuruda.

SOIL TESTING

The soil samples keep coming in. These folks are not guessing at their fertilizer needs and gambling on expensive N-P-K. They are able to determine liming needs, work on fine-tuning fertilizer budgets, and use money saved on weed control.

Smart money.

WEATHER

I hope that you are watching the weather forecasts for temperature predictions. I hope that you haven't jumped the gun as the old saying goes and planted too early.

This past week's weather just showed us who is boss, with sleet and freezing cold and harsh winds. I've had discussions with different ones about holding off on planting warm-season stuff, and I know that one or two of them probably went on and did it anyway.

Remember, the right season is not just based on air temperature, but also soil temperature. And a short warm-up won't do it with a rough cold spell like we just had.

Our average last frost day is around April 15 to April 19, depending on the data you read. Any way you look at it, we are still a bit early.

FRUIT TREES

I got asked about apple tree varieties last week. I have a great reference, Dr. David Lockwood, our UT fruit and nut specialist. Here are his recommendations for apples and pears.

For apples, here are some disease resistant varieties that should do well in Tennessee: Crimson Crisp, Crimson Gold, Crimson Topaz, Galarina, GoldRush, Enterprise, Liberty, Querina, and WineCrisp. Of this group, he has grown Liberty and Freedom. Both are good, but Liberty is a personal favorite. He has tasted the others and they are good. Arkansas Black is an old variety that is not very disease prone and that will do well in Tennessee. It also keeps a long time, as does GoldRush.

In regards to apple rootstocks, MM111 is the most forgiving apple rootstock we have. It is a semi-dwarf, giving about 20% reduction in tree size. It is a freestanding, long-lived tree. It is resistant to woolly apple aphid, a problem in Tennessee, and tolerant to a fairly wide range of soil conditions. In regards to dwarf trees, the smaller the tree, the more intense the management must be. As a rule, dwarf trees need support by staking or trellising and irrigation since the root systems are more confined than with semi-dwarf trees.

His primary caution regarding pears is to select varieties having fireblight resistance. Bartlett, Bosc and Anjou are three of the more popular varieties of pears, but they should NEVER be planted in Tennessee due to their extreme fireblight susceptibility. Potential European pear varieties for Tennessee include Ayers, Moonglow, Seckel, Starking Delicious and Warren. Keiffer is an option if the fruit are to be used for preserves, but not for fresh consumption. If Asian pears are desired, look at 20th Century, Hosui, Kosui and Chojuro. Rootstock options for pears are limited. There are no dwarf rootstocks that he knows of. Usually, seedling or Pyrus callyana are used for full-sized trees and quince is sometimes used for a semi-dwarf tree.

THE KIDS

Ford turned nine years old this week and we helped him celebrate. We also got to take in two ballgames. Hank played his usual center field position and he made some really good catches for outs and then threw runners out at second and third. Ford played the infield, made some great catches and got a good hit or two.

Piper is taking more riding lessons, and she was taught how to post on a Saddlebred being led by an instructor. It's good for her strength and balance. She loves riding and takes it seriously most of the time, except when she wants to be a little giggly!

Kids, they're something else!

He said he plans to serve all the favorites and classic of his Lynchburg location in Shelbyville, including pulled pork and smoked sausage plates, chicken salad sandwiches, loaded nachos, and of course, his signature "grilled cheese on crack."

The restaurant will be open every Friday and Saturday and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. New hours for Nearest Green Distillery are Fridays and Saturdays 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sundays 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Viqueens rebound, win Walking Horse Classic

'We won't lose this game,' Mitchell says

By RICKEY CLARDY
Sports Writer

UNIONVILLE — The Community Viqueens played a total of six games in a span of 29 hours over the weekend and bounced back after a loss in pool play to the Zion Christian Eagles to defeat the Eagles 3-1 and claim the championship of its own Walking Horse Classic.

Community (14-6) started its journey on a chilly Friday afternoon by defeating Cannon County 11-0, but fell for the third time this season to Zion Christian 7-4 in a later pool game.

A frigid Saturday morning greeted the Viqueens as they defeated Mt. Pleasant 12-4 in their first game of the day.

With temperatures warming as the day progressed, Community defeated Culleoka 17-3 and finished pool play with a 3-1 record and the number two seed.

The Viqueens faced Mt. Pleasant in the semifinals of the single elimination round and once again defeated the Lady Tigers 14-4 to create a rematch against the Eagles in the Classic finals.

The Viqueens, playing as the visiting team, took the lead against Zion Christian in the opening inning.

Abbi Murrill was hit by a pitch and scored on a two-out single by Carlie Blanton as Community took a 1-0 lead.

Community increased its lead in the second. A sacrifice bunt by Emma Bentley and another two-out RBI-single, this time by Murrill put the Viqueens up 3-0.

Meanwhile, Viqueen hurler Haley Mitchell pitched out of a bases-loaded first inning jam to preserve the Community lead.

Mitchell walked four and allowed three hits while striking out three as the Eagles could only score a second inning run.

The Viqueen defense backed up its pitcher with a superb defensive effort as Community avenged its earlier loss to the Eagles.

"I was pleased that we adjusted," Coach Cam Farrell of the Viqueens said. "That's one of the better pitchers that we've seen."

"I had a conversation with the girls and we got in the cage and got to work and was proud of how they responded," Farrell added. "I told them to prepare for it like it's a state game."

Farrell was pleased with the leadership and pitching of Mitchell.

"She is the epitome of leadership," Farrell said. "She led the team and told her teammates we're not going to lose this game."

Community hosted East Hickman on Monday and will entertain Forrest in a District 7-AA game on Tuesday.

Eagles stay unbeaten in district

T-G STAFF REPORT

McMINNVILLE — Shelbyville Central claimed a shutout in a 3-0 win on the road at Warren County to remain undefeated in district play on Thursday evening.

"They came out early with a penalty off of a counter and our keeper Jonathan Rojas saved his second penalty of the season," Shelbyville Central coach Chris Fritz said. "We had most of the possession and our boys controlled the tempo of the game."

Edgar Solis came across the box for redirect goal in the first half to make the score 1-0.

Daniel Juarez followed with a long shot for a 2-0 lead.

At the beginning of the second half, Bryan Contreras drew a penalty with a dribble in the box that was converted by Edgar Solis.

'This was our first shutout of the season and it came against a talented Warren County team, Fritz said.

The Eagles (4-4, 2-0) host Coffee County on Tuesday at home 7 for another district match.

Scheffler claims Masters and No. 1 ranking

By DOUG FERGUSON
AP Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Scottie Scheffler looked like a Masters champion even before he slipped into his green jacket, the model of calm as he methodically worked his way around the most stressful course in major championship golf.

Sunday morning was different. That turned out to be the toughest test he had all day.

"I cried like a baby this morning. I was so stressed out. I didn't know what to do," Scheffler said after winning his first major. "I was sitting there telling (wife) Meredith, "I don't think I'm ready for this ... and I just felt overwhelmed."

And then he capped off his torrid two-month stretch with his grandest feat of all, leading the entire weekend and strolling to a 1-under 71 — with one lapse in concentration at the end when it didn't matter — for a three-shot victory over Rory McIlroy.

For a guy who had won three of his previous five tournament, who reached No. 1 in the world, why suddenly be overcome with doubt?

"I think because it's the Masters. I dreamed of having a chance to play in this golf tournament. I teared up the first time I got my invitation in the mail," Scheffler said.

"If you're going to choose a golf tournament to win, this would be the tournament," he said. "You don't know how many chances you're going to get. And so having a chance — I had a five-shot lead on Friday and then a three-shot lead going into today — I don't know if you get better opportunities than that. You don't want to waste them."

He felt peace between the ropes and never allowed himself to enjoy the moment until he took that famous walk up the 18th green, his ball 40 feet away and a five-shot lead.

"And you saw the results of that," he said with a laugh at his four-putt double bogey that only affected the margin of victory.

McIlroy holed out from the bunker on the final hole for a record-tying final round of 64. That pulled him within three shots, and his only hope for the final piece of the career Grand Slam was for the Sunday pressure at Augusta National to get to Scheffler.

No chance.

Not on Sunday. Not the last four days. Not the last two months.

"You get on those hot streaks, and you just got to ride them out because they, unfortunately, don't last forever," Justin Thomas said. "But he is doing it in the biggest tournaments. ... It's really, really impressive to see someone that young handle a moment this big so easily."

And to think that 56 days ago, Scheffler was still trying to win his first PGA Tour title. Now he's won four of the last six he has played, the best stretch since Jason Day in the summer of 2015.

The Sunday theater, thrilling and tragic, belonged to everyone else.

Scheffler overcame a nervy moment early in the round by chipping in for birdie. He delivered key putts to keep Cameron

Woods shoots career-worst 78 at the Masters

By WILL GRAVES
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Tiger Woods used to turn weekends at Augusta National into gripping theatre, relentlessly charging up the leaderboard one fearless drive, one feathery iron, one nervy putt at a time.

Not now. Maybe not ever again.

The magic the five-time Masters champion summoned so easily for so long was nowhere to be found during another labored four-plus hour journey underneath the Georgia pines on Saturday. His 6-over 78 marked his worst in 93 career rounds at the tournament he has come to define and left him at 7-over.

The limp from his surgically repaired right leg growing more pronounced with each deliberate, cautious step, the 46-year-old slipped further down the leaderboard to end whatever chance — however unlikely — of being a factor come late Sunday afternoon.

There was no familiar charge in the early April chill. Just the reality that 14 months removed from a serious car accident that threatened to end his career, Woods can still play golf. He just can't do it — at least not at the moment — at the level needed to compete in a field consisting of younger players, many who grew up idolizing him but have long outgrown standing in awe of him.

Following a gritty back-nine push on Friday that helped him stay on the fringe of contention, Woods walked to the first tee Saturday two hours before the leaders. Looking to send a jolt through the gallery that stood five-deep in places hoping for a glimpse and a chance to roar, Woods instead spent most of the afternoon silently glaring at the hole or his putter — or both.

He three-putted the par-4 first from 54 feet for a bogey, a sign of things to come. On the par-4 fifth, he slung his club in disgust after his approach drifted to the right, far away from a back left hole location. His lag attempt from 60-feet over a ridge was well short. His rolled his 3-feet by and his comebacker for bogey hit the hole and bounced out. It was Woods' first four-putt at the Masters — ever.

Woods

Things never really got better. Three more three-putts followed on an afternoon where nothing really felt right. And it wasn't just his leg. It was his back. His hands. His posture. Everything.

Even worse, there seemed to be no way to compensate. He tinkered, the kind of searching usually reserved for the practice range, not in the middle of a major.

"As many putts as I had, you'd think I'd have figured it out somewhere along the line, but it just didn't happen," he said.

While Woods was slowly making his way up the 18th fairway, leader Scottie Scheffler — just 25 and the world's top-ranked golfer — was making the turn doing at the Masters what Woods has done so often over the last quarter-century: imposing his will on the course and the tournament.

"We all wish we had that two, three-month window when we get hot, and hopefully majors fall somewhere along in that window," Woods said. "We take care of it in those windows. Scottie seems to be in that window right now."

A window that is currently closed for Woods. While it would be easy to call his mere presence in northeast Georgia this weekend a victory in itself considering last fall he wondered if he'd ever play competitively again, Woods isn't in this to be a feel-good story. He has no interest in being a ceremonial field filler.

His steely 1-under 71 during the first round on Thursday only seemed to embolden him. Following a shaky front-nine 39 on Friday, he recovered to shoot 74 and easily get in under the cutline.

He opened with another sloppy 39 on the front Saturday. And for a few fleeting minutes shortly after he made the turn, it appeared another rally was in store.

A crisp iron to 14 feet on No. 12 and a two-putt birdie at the par-5 13th provided a spark that never became a flame. He bogeyed the 16th and 17th and his approach up the hill to the 18th sailed into the gallery. His bump-and-run caught the slope and kept rolling, with Woods gingerly chasing after it long before it came to a stop nearly 60 feet away from the pin.

Three more putts and his worst round at Augusta was finally over. His 78 was one more than the 77 he put together in the third round of his first trip to Augusta in 1995.

He was an amateur back then, a 19-year-old phenom. Two years later, he was a champion. Two-plus decades later, he is a Hall of Famer and one of the greatest in the history of his sport. He's also a middle-aged father of two trying to recapture something far more elusive than it used to be.

"Each and every day is a challenge," he said. "Each and every day presents its own different challenges for all of us. I wake up and start the fight all over again."

Masters

Smith at bay and never looked rattled, even as he was swatting at short putts at the end.

McIlroy was the runner-up. It was Smith who felt as though he let one get away. The Aussie was still in the game, three shots out of the lead, when he dumped his 9-iron in Rae's Creek on the par-3 12th hole for triple bogey and ended his hopes.

"Just a really bad swing at the wrong time," Smith said.

Smith closed with a 73 and tied for third with Shane Lowry, who birdied the 18th for a 69.

Tiger Woods was finishing up about the time Scheffler was getting started, and anyone who left missed quite a show. As for Woods, he found consolation in playing four rounds in his first tournament since a February 2021 car crash shattered his right leg. He shot 78 and finished at 13-over 301, his highest 72-hole score at the Masters and furthest (23 shots) he ever finished behind the winner.

Scheffler joined Ian Woosnam in 1991 as the only players to win a major — the Masters in both cases — in their debut at No. 1 in the world.

Everyone should have seen this coming. He won the Phoenix Open in a playoff on Super Bowl Sunday. He followed that with a comeback win at Bay Hill to win the Arnold Palmer Invitational. He rose to No. 1 in the world by winning the Match Play two weeks ago in Texas.

And now this.

"He's sort of been head and shoulders above everyone else this week," McIlroy said.

Scheffler, who finished at 10-under 278, won $2.7 million from the $15 million prize fund. That brings his total to $8,872,200 over his last six starts.

Scheffler's big moment came early in the round, and it was no less significant.

Starting the final round with a three-shot lead, he watched Smith open with two straight birdies to the cut the deficit to one, and then Scheffler's approach from the pine needles left of the third fairway came up short and rolled back down the slope.

His pitch was racing toward the hole when it banged into the pin and dropped for an unlikely birdie, and a two-shot swing when Smith from the same position made bogey.

No one got closer than three the rest of the way. Only the contenders changed.

The 12th hole remains the most riveting par 3 in golf, the scene of more collapses than comebacks. Smith became the latest victim.

Coming off birdie at No. 11, his shot was still in the air when he let his club slip through his hands and he slowly closed his eyes twice as it splashed into Rae's Creek. The next shot wasn't much better, but at least dry, and Smith's hopes ended there with a triple bogey.

He was three behind standing on the 12th tee. Three holes later, he was eight back.

From there, any hope resided with McIlroy. All he needed to complete the career Grand Slam was to match the best final round in Masters history and get some help from Scheffler. He only got one of those and had to settle for his first silver medal from Augusta.

Not that he didn't create some Sunday magic. McIlroy went bunker-to-bunker on the 18th hole, leaving himself right of the green and aiming some 25 feet right of the flag. It rode the slope all the way into the hole, setting off one of the loudest roars of the week.

William Byron, driver of the No. 24 Chevy, takes the checkered flag at Martinsville.

Byron races to NASCAR Cup-leading 2nd victory

By HANK KURZ Jr.
AP Sports Writer

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — William Byron knew he was in for a big challenge with a two-lap overtime sprint about to start and the very aggressive Joey Logano right behind him.

He also felt like he had a pretty remarkable co-pilot in his corner.

"This one is for my mom," Byron said. "This same weekend last year she had kind of a mini-stroke and was diagnosed with brain cancer. It means a lot to have her here and it's been a crazy year. But she's doing great. I kind of felt like she was riding in there with me."

Byron took the lead on pit road after Stage 2 stops and held it pretty much the rest of the way at Martinsville Speedway — he led 212 laps — to become the first repeat winner this season in NASCAR's Cup Series on Saturday night.

Byron needed to hold off a challenge — and a nudge — from Logano on a two-lap overtime sprint to finish it, but won for the fourth time in his career and gave Hendrick Motorsports four victories in eight races this season.

When the final caution, and only the second for an on-track issue of the night, came with five laps to go, Byron and the seven drivers behind him opted to stay out for the final dash.

"I thought everyone behind us would pit, and luckily we stayed out," he said. "We were aggressive; we felt like we could refire on the tires and be OK, and you've got one of the most aggressive guys behind you in Logano."

Byron had both a fast car that allowed him to pull away on restarts and a strong one on long runs, critical since there wasn't a caution for anything but the end of a stage until the 311th of 400 laps on the 0.526-mile oval.

That changed when Todd Gilliland had a flat tire and hit the wall with five laps to go. Byron and the top eight cars on the track opted not to pit, with Byron picking the inside lane and Austin Dillon, running second, on the outside.

That gave Logano a prime opportunity to bump the leader out of the way, especially when Dillon spun his tires on the restart. Logano bumped Byron in Turn 2 on the last lap, but Byron held on for his second win of the weekend. He won in the Truck Series on Thursday night, earning him a pair of the raceway's unique grandfather clock trophies for three days of solid racing.

"Willy kind of messed up off of 4 and let me get to him, and he did a really good job of brake checking into third, right, which is a good job," Logano said. "He did what he was supposed to do, and kind of got me all stuffed up behind him and I couldn't accelerate off the corner and be as close as I needed to be."

Logano was second, followed by Dillon, Ryan Blaney and Ross Chastain.

Dillon appeared to have a car likely to challenge on a long green-flag run, and beat Logano for second on a restart with 80 laps to go, but after Byron pulled away, lapped traffic and consistency helped him build a nearly three-second lead.

The start of the race was delayed by more than an hour when rain and sleet fell on an already frigid night. It got underway with radar suggesting more precipitation was coming, perhaps even some snow, but none materialized.

It all conspired to provide a clean track, and a virtual single-file parade.

Pole-sitter Chase Elliott led the first 185 laps, winning the first and second stages for the fifth time in his career, but lost the lead in the caution stops that followed Stage 2 and had trouble as the night went on. He finished 10th.

Quirky

Elliott's 185 laps led to begin the race matched what Darrell Waltrip did at the start of the 1980 race at Martinsville. Waltrip, though, went on to win.

JGR struggles

Coming off a victory at Richmond Raceway and to another short track where he leads all active drivers with five wins, any hope Denny Hamlin brought to Martinsville was taken away bit by bit. He qualified 25th, was lapped by Elliott at the end of Stage 1 and made laps in the back of the field and finished 28th.

The rest of the Joe Gibbs Racing stable didn't fare much better, though Kyle Busch rallied for seventh. Martin Truex Jr., who'd won three of the last five races here, finished 22nd and Christopher Bell was 20th.

Up next

The top series moves to its third straight short track, this time on the dirt at Bristol Motor Speedway next Sunday.

Steelers backup QB killed in auto accident

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Dwayne Haskins was working on a second chapter for his young NFL career. The 24-year-old quarterback was spending time with some teammates with the Pittsburgh Steelers, getting ready to compete for a starting job.

That's when his life was cut short.

Haskins was killed early Saturday morning when he was hit by a dump truck while he was walking on a South Florida highway. Florida Highway Patrol spokeswoman Lt. Indiana Miranda said Haskins was pronounced dead at the scene.

"He was attempting to cross the westbound lanes of Interstate 595 when there was oncoming traffic," Miranda said in an emailed statement.

Miranda didn't say why Haskins was on the highway at the time. The accident caused the highway to be shut down for several hours, and Miranda said it's "an open traffic homicide investigation."

A 2019 first-round draft pick by Washington, Haskins was released by the team after going 3-10 over two seasons. He was signed by Pittsburgh as a developmental QB, but he didn't appear in a game last season.

Haskins appeared to be in South Florida this week with several teammates, including fellow quarterback Mitch Trubisky, running back Najee Harris and tight end Pat Freiermuth.

Haskins' death sparked an outpouring of grief from multiple corners of the NFL, particularly from former teammates with the Steelers and Commanders.

"I am devastated and at a loss for words with the unfortunate passing of Dwayne Haskins," Steelers coach Mike Tomlin said. "He quickly became part of our Steelers family upon his arrival in Pittsburgh and was one of our hardest workers, both on the field and in our community. Dwayne was a great teammate, but even more so a tremendous friend to so many. I am truly heartbroken.

"Our thoughts and prayers are with his wife, Kalabrya, and his entire family during this difficult time."

Washington coach Ron Rivera said he was "absolutely heartbroken" to learn of Haskins' death.

"Dwayne was a talented young man who had a long life ahead of him," Rivera said in a release. "This is a very sad time and I am honestly at a loss for words. I know I speak for the rest of our team in saying he will be sorely missed. Our entire team is sending our heartfelt condolences and thoughts and prayers to the Haskins family at this time."

Ohio State posted a photo of Haskins on its Twitter feed, topped by the description "Leader. Legend. Forever a Buckeye."

At Ohio State, Haskins set single-season records for touchdowns passing with 50 and yards passing with 4,831. He was the 2019 Rose Bowl MVP as the Buckeyes went 13-1.

Ohio State coach Ryan Day, who was the quarterbacks coach during Haskins' final season at the school, called Haskins' death "beyond tragic."

"For those who knew him closely, he was much more than a great football player," Day posted on Twitter. "He had a giant heart, old soul and an infectious smile. The Ohio State community and our entire football program are heartbroken."

The Steelers gave Haskins a chance to resurrect his career in January 2021 when they signed him a month after being released by Washington. Humbled by the decision, Haskins stressed he was eager to work hard and absorb as much as he could from Ben Roethlisberger and Mason Rudolph.

Haskins made the roster as the third-stringer but only dressed once, serving as the backup in a tie with Detroit after Roethlisberger was placed into the COVID-19 protocol the night before the game.

"The world lost a great person today," Steelers star T.J. Watt posted on Twitter. "When Dwayne first walked into the locker room I could tell he was an upbeat guy. He was always making people smile, never taking life for granted."

FCE Clubs celebrate 3 years of achievement

Bedford County Family and Community Education Clubs (FCE) celebrated the past 3 years of accomplishments at its Achievement Night Program on April 7. The theme was "Decades of FCE" and five members played the role of a member from the 1940s to the 1980s, telling of the happenings in Shelbyville and Bedford County as well as what was going on in the FCE Clubs (known as home demonstration clubs until the 1980s.)

Charlene Judd led the attendees in singing a song representing each decade. County Council President, Betty Brown, was the emcee for the evening and Hazel Foster brought the devotional.

There was a moment of silence to recognize the passing of six members since 2019 — Andrea Bolden, Mary Evelyn Davidson, Barbara Green, Sara Kelly, Janie Pickle and Joan Pimentel.

Master Clubs for the 2019 club year were Butler's Creek, Fairview, Four Corners, Heart of the Home, Liberty and Town and Country. Recognized for 10 years of 100% membership was Helen Williams.

The top readers for 2019 to 2021 were Marie Spence, Cecelia Dougan, Judy Williams, Betty Davis, Janie Pickle and Lucile Sorrells.

Members recognized for their outstanding community service through the Certified Volunteer Unit Program were Vicky Faulkner, Charlene Judd, Janet Regynski and Connie Smith.

Four members received a 50 year member pin and certificate — Gay Ervin, Jane Lile, Ann Canady and Patsy Parker. The evening was concluded with a game of naming the businesses on the Shelbyville Square in 1962 and reading the club creed.
