National Domestic Violence Awareness Month

October: Domestic Violence Awareness Month

Thousands call agencies for help

By ZOË HAGGARD
zhaggard@-g.com

It's easy to brush by that title and not take in the full extent of its meaning. But several local organizations provide help for those who deal with domestic abuse day after day and month after month.

For Bedford County's Haven of Hope—a care group and emergency shelter for victims of domestic abuse and sexual assault—they had some 1,113 calls made to the crisis hotline, according to their latest fiscal year report.

Expanding outreach

For those calling for domestic abuse, Haven of Hope has pushed on further and started a violence fatality review team, which will identify and review domestic abuse deaths and facilitate communication.

"Domestic violence doesn't discriminate...and a lot of people don't think their cases are serious. We provide help for everyone. These people are out here all the time and the best thing to do is bring awareness and to listen...to understand their needs and prevent further harm," said Allison Niffen from Haven of Hope.

These organizations often do not work alone. For example, Haven of Hope takes on high risk cases to shelter, while Blue Monarch, a residential recovery center in Monteagle, focuses on helping women and children in domestic abuse relationships recover after the fact.

"Part of what makes us unique is that we focus on the child's recovery as much as we do the mother's recovery," said Susan Binkley, founder of Blue Monarch.

Breaking the cycle

Blue Monarch began in 2003 after Binkley had a dream—a literal dream where she was given a book on how to start something like Blue Monarch, she said.

"It fell into place exactly like the dream," she said.

As a former art gallery director and horse farm owner, her background has no connection to what she does today. But she and her team have created a unique organization that's tailored to provide hands-on support and residential recovery space to focus on "parenting sober."

At the start, "I thought we'd be dealing primarily with domestic violence, and what I've realized, very quickly, was that drug use becomes a part of that—that they almost go hand-in-hand because so many women turn to some substance to numb themselves from the pain. And then the drug use becomes an even bigger problem than

Money, temper drive 2 domestic violence incidents

By DAVID MELSON

A suspect allegedly angry at his girlfriend because she only gave him $570 instead of the full amount she owed him was arrested on a domestic assault charge Friday, according to the Bedford County Sheriff's Office.

Fernando Delroy Rhodes, 36, of Sims Road wants to buy a van and became upset over not being given more money, Sgt. Clyde Boyce's report said. Rhodes allegedly struck the woman in the face, cutting her lips, and was grabbed twice and pushed down as she tried to run out the back door of their Sims Road home.

The victim tried to make it to a nearby relative's home but Rhodes allegedly pushed her down again. She went back to their home and gave him money and vehicle keys but was grabbed by the neck, the report said.

Rhodes also broke her cellphone and a television before she was able to get away and call for help.

"The biggest concern to him in his statement was the money issue and not the assault," Boyce's report said.

Rhodes posted $2,500 bond.

•Alcohol and anger don't mix, as a Shelbyville couple found out last Thursday night.

Incidents

told police was suffered when Dodson pushed her down a few days earlier.

Friday's incident allegedly escalated to Dodson hitting her in the face several times with his fist and shoving her out the door of their Green Lane camper home onto the ground. Dodson dragged her across the driveway, where she told Officer Dylan Bliss she thought she was unconscious at one point, the report said.

Dodson said she hit him several times and he was attempting to get her back into the camper.

"There were obvious drag marks in the driveway," Bliss said in his report.

The victim had a bloody nose, swollen eye and a cut to the back of her head, according to Bliss. She was "strongly urged" by medical personnel to go to the hospital but didn't immediately do so, police said.

Dodson was charged with aggravated domestic assault and held on $15,000 bond.

Violence

the domestic violence," Binkley explained.

And from this drug abuse, domestic violence becomes a cycle, which creates a "culture" of domestic abuse.

"One of the things we've noticed is many of the women don't mark on their application that they're a victim of domestic violence because they don't recognize that as such. Maybe they grew up with it in the home and it's just a part of their culture," she said.

It's not until they are taken out of those situations to live at the residents at Blue Monarch that they realize what an unhealthy relationship looks like—which even spreads to their children.

If the children have seen or witnessed any of that abuse in the past, then it's very likely they will repeat that one day, Binkley said. Part of what Blue Monarch tries to do is teach the child that that kind of behavior is inappropriate.

"That's one of the things that I think is really valuable in our parenting program—is that it's not uncommon for the child to show up, treating the mom with no more respect than what they've observed the father treat her. And so really, it's a cycle that has to be broken; we have a great opportunity to break it while they're here," said Binkley. They take in children under the age of nine.

Often, Mom doesn't know how to respond to her 9-year-old son who's cussing and hitting her—so, that really takes hands-on coaching, Binkley explained.

That, too, has been exacerbated by the pandemic. "We have so many children with trauma, which has increased over the last couple of years, especially with all the quarantining." Binkley said she is expecting to hear even more stories, and Blue Monarch has added the new position of child life specialist to help with the increase in cases.

Other programs

They also take in women who have a history of incarceration, sex abuse, and drug abuse—women who have lost custody and regain custody. But in Blue Monarch's nearly 20-year history, close to 300 women have been reunited with their children.

Blue Monarch provides parenting classes and work ethic program as well as the opportunity for women to work making "Out of the Blue" granola, a unique and popular treat that started at a restaurant Binkley had in Sewanee. It is now produced onsite at the Blue Monarch facility.

This is coupled with Blue Monarch's faith-based programs, which give the women and children of domestic abuse something new to seek.

"As they develop a personal relationship with God, then a lot of times that relationship fills that void that they have so desperately been trying to fill. And then they're less inclined to seek it everywhere," Binkley said.

So, getting initiatives like Domestic Awareness Month out can help people become informed and, hopefully, emboldened to speak up when they see domestic abuse.

"Sometimes I wish people would be more bold because I feel like sometimes people might suspect that there's a problem or they might even know for sure there's a problem, but they don't act on it and... They become a part of problem because they're telling women they deserve what's happening to them," Binkley added.

TOURISM TEAM

Getting to the heart of tourism, from left, are Lisa Carden, Sylvia Pinson, Daniel Berry and Ryan French. Their office is located at 118 Public Square East on the Shelbyville Public Square. French and Berry, along with Bedford County Commissioner Sylvia Pinson and Lisa Carden, are contracted with SCTTA for the next year to help bring tourism marketing and branding to the Shelbyville-Bedford area. SCTTA is a nonprofit that was begun by the State of Tennessee Legislator in 1973, and its goal is to bring viable marketing tourism to the 13 counties across Tennessee it's with—including Bedford County.

Bedford County Republican Party has been really busy lately. The group has attended a lot of events, hosted a few of their own and made sure those who serve this community feel appreciated.

• BCRP volunteers helped put out flags for the Defenders of Freedom and Liberty Field of Flags on Lane Parkway in remembrance of the victims of 9-11.

• BCRP gave pocket copies of The U S Constitution to all 8th grade students in Bedford County Schools for Constitution Day on September 17th.

The group's next meeting will be Monday, Oct. 11, at 6:30 p..m. At 7:00, there will be a community forum with Shelbyville City Manager Josh Ray. Both meetings will be at the Chamber of Commerce.

Dog day afternoon

These fur buddies had it made Saturday during the Halls Mill Sorghum Festival. Unfortunately, there any many, many dogs in this community who need good, loving families. They've either been abused or left on the roadside to die. Check with your local animal control departments to adopt or at least foster until good homes are found.

More dryer safety hints

Hints from Heloise

Heloise

Dear Readers: I have received a number of great suggestions after we ran a hint in my column about dryer safety. Here's another one:

Dear Heloise: Regarding using the dryer when no one's home or you're asleep. When I might wash a load late at night, I will hang my clothes overnight, outside or inside my house, using my dining chairs or whatever is available at the time. I pretty much hang almost everything. The dryer will fluff for me and take out wrinkles when needed. We need to go back to taking advantage of our free sun, also inside air. -- Gloria, Bakersfield, California

GRIEVING HELP

Dear Heloise: I wanted to send a response to Luanne Gehrig, whose husband passed and her friends quit calling after a few days. Like Luanne, I lost my husband about 18 months ago. I received several sympathy cards, which I appreciated, and a couple neighbors sent over a deli plate. After a week, people pretty much quit calling, emailing or texting. It was like I was supposed to be "over" my husband being gone after being married for 35 years. It hurt.

Please, friends and family of someone who has lost their loved one ... give them a call, offer to come by and help with dishes, dusting, sorting, etc. Offer to take the person to lunch, or bring lunch to them. I wish I had had support. I guess basically my suggestion to everyone would be this: Reach out, offer help, and just because a person says they don't need anything right then, it doesn't mean they would not welcome a phone call or a handwritten note. -- A Widow in Missouri

Dear Readers: This is an important reminder to help our neighbors and friends who have lost a family member, and to stay in touch when people need it the most. -- Heloise

CLEANING WINDOWS

Dear Readers: This is a dirty task that none of us like to do, yet it must be done. Use vinegar, an inexpensive household staple, to get the job done well. Spray full-strength white vinegar on the glass and allow it to remain for a while to do its job. Then scrub with nylon net or a plastic scrubby to remove anything that still might be on the window. If the windows are really dirty or have heavy deposits on them, you might have to repeat this process. After you get the windows clean, buff the windows with cloth or paper towels.

Vinegar is an essential item with many uses around the home, including cleaning, deodorizing and cooking. So I put together a six-page pamphlet full of vinegar uses that you can have by visiting www.Heloise.com. Or send $5 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (75 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Vinegar, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001. FYI: To help keep paintbrushes soft and supple, soak in vinegar and water for several hours. -- Heloise

STOLEN PURSE OR CREDIT CARD?

Dear Heloise: I wanted to add some great advice to your article in the San Gabriel Valley Tribune regarding a stolen purse or credit card. Everyone should make a photocopy, front and back, of everything in their wallet/purse and place it in a safe place. That way, if the wallet/purse is stolen or lost, you have all of the information in one place at your fingertips. It only takes a couple of minutes to do and could save you lots of time. -- Peggy Neiman, via email

Peggy, it's important to safeguard all your credit cards and personal information. Make a master list that you keep online, or store copies in a secure place at home. If you have an emergency, you can then access this information right away. -- Heloise

What is dark chocolate?

Chocolate features cocoa powder, which comes from the cocoa bean. This powder is unsweetened and bitter before being used as a main ingredient in recipes. Traditional milk chocolate adds high amounts of sugar and fat, but dark chocolate has higher levels of cocoa powder and fewer unhealthy additions.

According to Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health, dark chocolate contains 50-90% cocoa solids, cocoa butter and sugar, while milk chocolate contains 10-50% cocoa solids, cocoa butter, milk in some form and sugar. Some innovative chocolate companies are even coming out with sugar-free dark chocolate options.

Sugar-free dark chocolate

"As more everyday occasions call for celebrations with chocolate and we snack more at home, we wanted to offer a guilt-free and delicious option," shares Crystal Thomas, KOHLER Original Recipe Chocolates chocolatier and production manager at Destination Kohler. "We dedicated over a year to source the best chocolate from France with the highest content of cacao for optimal health benefits and flavor. Add a few premium ingredients and you get Sugar-Free Chocolate."

Without the excessive additives, dark chocolate can be a healthy part of a balanced diet and provide numerous benefits. Cocoa beans have flavanols, a type of phytonutrient with health-promoting properties. The Mayo Clinic points to research that the ingredients in dark chocolate can help reduce inflammation, lowers risk of heart disease, reduces blood pressure and more.

How to enjoy dark chocolate

Because of its healthy characteristics and indulgent taste, dark chocolate is a top food trend. Be inspired by these seven ways to enjoy dark chocolate:

Serve chocolate for dessert: Dark chocolate is a decadent dessert that impresses. It's also a time-saving option because there's no kitchen prep needed. Just plan ahead by buying high-quality dark chocolates and confections and serve a single piece or several on a small plate to each person.

Create a chocolate board: Much like a cheeseboard or charcuterie tray, a chocolate board presents a variety of dark chocolate and accompaniments in a visually impressive way. Start with a large tray or serving dish, fill with several varieties of dark chocolate grouped in an eye-pleasing way, and add extras such as nuts, pretzels and fresh berries.

Explore classic combinations: Dark chocolate complements classic flavors so you can satisfy curious taste buds.

Enjoy chocolate for breakfast: Chocolate can be a healthy part of breakfast when you keep unsweetened cocoa powder on hand. Try sprinkling this powder on top of cereal, oatmeal or toast in the morning. You can also add some to your morning smoothie for a chocolatey boost.

Make it a mocha: Melt a single piece of dark chocolate in your coffee in the morning for a rich mocha taste you can feel good about. Place a small piece in the bottom of your cup, pour coffee on top and then mix with a spoon. To speed up the process, microwave the chocolate for 10 seconds in your cup first to start the melting.

Try different pairings: The flavors of dark chocolate can be a wonderful pairing to other foods for a tasty snack or dessert any day. Try dark chocolate with nuts such as almonds, sweet fruits like banana or aged cheeses like Gouda. Dark chocolate also pairs nicely with coffee or a glass of red wine.

Give dark chocolate gifts: Whether as a hostess gift or to celebrate a special occasion, dark chocolate can be the perfect present. Visit KohlerChocolates.com to shop for beautiful artisanal dark chocolate creations that can be safely shipped across the country.

UT/TSU Extension

INVADING INSECTS

My calls have started. I've seen them here in the office and at home. Here is information on two of the worst.

LADY BEETLE REMINDER

Dr. Karen M. Vail, UT Extension entomologist, shared these comments quite some time ago, but they are very pertinent still. She explains a lot here about the Mulit-Colored Asian Beetle (MALB), otherwise called lady beetles for ladybugs.

These insects tart searching for overwintering sites, your home, on the second day when temperatures are greater the 65E F after a dramatic drop in temperature, usually to near freezing. Vertical contrast and not house color influences attractiveness of homes to MALB. Research from North Carolina revealed that it is vertical contrast, such as black shutters against light-colored walls, shadows cast by a chimney, white shutters against a dark background, that is attractive to beetles. Color of the house will not matter in attractiveness to the beetle. After all, they are looking for a crack in a white/light-colored cliff or rock outcropping.

To manage these intruders, conduct the following steps 1 and 2 by late September/early October, before MALB start their invasion. First, seal entry points, keep window screens intact, screen vent openings, etc., before the beetles arrive. (See our UT Extension Service SP 503C Lady Beetles Invading Homes [http:// www.utextension.utk.edu/publications/spfiles/sp503c.pdf] for more specific recommendations on sealing entry points.)

Second, treat roof lines or soffits, vertical contrast areas, and entry points (around the following items: windows, doors, vents, pipe penetrations) with pesticides before the beetles arrive. Professionals' products such as Demand CS (lambda-cyhalothrin), Suspend (deltamethrin) or Talstar (bifenthrin) provided 96, 95, and 84% effectiveness at three weeks post-treatment, respectively, when applied to vinyl siding. Terro Ant Killer (0.2% permethrin w/PBO) and Bayer Advanced Home (0.1% cyfluthrin) provided 96 and 92% effectiveness at three weeks post-treatment. Retreatment in three weeks may be necessary.

Third, remove dead beetles as they pile up because they may cause other MALB to aggregate. And fourth, if the beetles make their way into the home, try a light trap (see description below or other traps listed at http://ipm.osu.edu/lady/lady.htm) or a vacuum. Use a vacuum with an HEPA filter to prevent allergens from becoming airborne.

The Ohio State University IPM Staff developed an inexpensive trapping device for use in homes. Pictures and details of the homemade trap's construction can be found on the web (http://ipm.osu. edu/lady/blt1.htm). In their tests, the homemade trap caught about 70% of the released beetles in a room. They also mentioned that an incandescent bulb worked as well as a black light tube, but a black light incandescent bulb was not very effective. The homemade trap worked better if the funnel and collecting container (both plastic milk jugs) were painted black and dusted with talc.

For a good reference on the ladybug, go to UT publication SP 503-C found online at https://ag.tennessee.edu/EPP/Extension%20Publications/Insects%20Lady%20Beetles%20Infesting%20Homes.pdf

STINK BUGS

This is another home invader that is not wanted. The prevention protocols are about the same for the ladybug discussed above. I would suggest that if these two insects have been a problem in the past, then now is the time to do something about it.

For the stink bug, there are a couple of things that are little different. One is that they can emit a strong offensive odor when disturbed. And they can and do damage plants with their feeding on these plants. There are several different varieties of stink bugs, one being the common green stink bug. I have attached a newer pest, the brown marmorated stink bug. The best reference for stink bugs is our UT publication W779 found online at https://extension.tennessee.edu/publications/Documents/W779.pdf

Rockets stun Champs, take 5-A driver's seat

By CHRIS SIERS
sports@t-g.com

In what could be a major deciding factor in the outcome of the Region 5-AA race, the Forrest Rockets got the upper hand on the Cascade Champions on Friday night.

The Rockets outscored the Champs 17-7 in the second half and secured a firm grip on the Region 5-AA standings with a 24-7 win over Cascade.

The loss was the first for the Champions this season.

Offense proved a struggle as the Rockets found the end zone with 21 seconds left in the first quarter for the only touchdown of the first half.

Hunter Bennett capped the drive with a one-yard plunge into the end zone to put Forrest up 7-0.

That lead held through the remainder of the first half.

The visitors doubled their lead with some nifty special teams play in the third quarter when Brenton Burchell took a 64-yard punt return to the house with 29 seconds left in the third quarter.

Trailing 14-0, Cascade finally got on the board early in the fourth frame when Ryan Inmon broke loose on a 75-yard trot.

Drake Hodge's successful kick after cut the Forrest lead in half, but that's where the Champs' offense ended.

Forrest was the beneficiary of a 25-yard field goal by Gavin Grissom and a two-yard run by Bennett to tack on 10 more points in the fourth to secure the win over the Champions.

The Rockets outgained Cascade, 267-228 yards. The Champs mustered up 166 yards on the ground, with Inmon's 75-yard score being the highlight of the night for Cascade.

He carried the ball 21 times for 139 yards for Cascade.

While the loss dings the Champs' chances at a Region 5-AA title, Cascade gets a manageable three-game stretch to end the regular season, beginning with DUNLAP – The Community Vikings battled all night to gain the upper hand against the Sequatchie County Indians, but couldn't quite make it over the hump as the Indians defeated the Vikings 36-26 in a Region 4-3A football contest Friday night.

In contrast to an offensive shootout in the fourth quarter, the first half turned out to be a defensive struggle.

Community (2-4, 0-2 R4-3A) failed to score on its first two possessions in the opening quarter as penalties stymied a second drive that reached the Indian 32-yard line. But the Viking defense stepped up and stopped the Indians on a fourth down conversion attempt to keep the game scoreless.

A 14-yard run by Dallas Grooms followed by a 38-yard run by Riker Reid moved the Vikings to the Sequatchie County 21 as the game moved to the sec-

Eagles' drives stall in region defeat at Lebanon

By GARY JOHNSON

LEBANON - The Golden Eagles moved the ball but couldn't find ways to finish drives in a disappointing 30-8 Region 3-6A loss at Lebanon on Friday night.

Shelbyville Central racked up 358 yards of total offense but struggled to find the end zone.

"This is one of the more frustrating games I've had in a long time. We just did not play well up front on the O-line tonight," Shelbyville Central coach Josh Puckett said. "Every time we got some momentum going on offense we would have a holding call then we gave a couple of big plays on defense. We've got to find a way to have some explosive plays on offense."

The Blue Devils led 13-0 after the first quarter, off a 95-yard run by Jaylen Abston and a 53-yard pass to Kemontez Logue from Abston.

Vrabel: Titans' loss is everyone's fault

By TERESA M. WALKER
AP Pro Football Writer

NASHVILLE — The Tennessee Titans are banged up, can't protect their quarterback and just lost to a previously winless team.

Yep, there's plenty of blame to go around.

"Nobody did well enough — head coach, assistant coaches, quarterback," coach Mike Vrabel said Monday. "We've been through this before. When you lose, we all have to do more, we all have to be better. I'm confident that we will. So we'll see who we have this week, we'll see who's available and get them ready."

The Titans settled for three field goals instead of touchdowns to start against the New York Jets and wound up losing 27-24 in overtime. The Jets hadn't even had a lead this season until late in the third quarter.

Tennessee, which has 11 players on injured reserve, played with a pair of Pro Bowl wide receivers in Julio Jones and A.J. Brown scratched because of injuries. That included outside linebacker Bud Dupree and three-time Pro Bowl punter Brett Kern, whose replacement shanked his first punt for 12 yards.

Three offensive linemen left with injuries, though two returned. Tennessee gave up a season-high seven sacks, had a season-high eight penalties for 98 yards and let a rookie quarterback escape time and again completing five passes of at least 29 yards or longer — one after fumbling the ball off the snap.

The combination has the Titans (2-2) at .500 after the first quarter of the season. Now a trip to Jacksonville (0-4) that no longer can be taken for granted by anyone, let alone the defending AFC South champs.

The Vikings could not continue their momentum on offense and failed to make a first down on a fourth down conversion attempt.

Once again, the Community defense stepped up after the Indians drove deep into Viking territory. After Sequatchie County reached the Viking 13-yard line, an Indian pass on fourth down was knocked down as Community took over possession.

The Vikings were helped by a pass interference penalty on their next possession to keep their drive alive, but an unsuccessful conversion attempt on fourth down gave the Indians good field position.

Sequatchie County responded as quarterback Payton Campbell rushed for 43 yards and followed with a 1-yard run for a touchdown. The extra point gave the Indians a 7-0 lead with 4:19 remaining.

Jubilation became disappointment for the Vikings on the ensuing kickoff as an 88-yard kickoff return by John Stanley was called back due to a penalty. Both teams failed to scored on their final possessions, though Maki Fleming created some excitement for Community by advancing an Indian fumble 30 yards to the Sequatchie County 22 as time expired.

"The defense came alive," Coach Chris Grooms of the Vikings said. "We had a pretty good game plan. It was working and they started changing and moving some personnel around and started getting some success."

"We started having to play the chess game to move some personnel, too," Grooms added.

The Indians started the second half with a 53-yard scoring drive, culminating with a 12-yard run by Campbell to give Sequatchie County a 13-0 lead.

The Vikings got their offense kick-started on their next possession. Two Indian penalties, one on fourth down that kept the Community drive alive, contributed to a 19-yard scoring pass from Grooms to Fleming that put the Vikings on the board. The run by Grooms cut the Indian lead to 13-8 with 4:28 remaining.

A 27-yard field goal on the next Indian possession by Hunter Roberson upped the Sequatchie County lead to 16-8.

After taking possession at their own 39-yard line, a 25-yard run by Grooms set up a first-and-goal opportunity for the Vikings as the game moved to the final quarter.

On third down, Grooms found Fleming again for 17 yards and a touchdown to get the Vikings within two.

After the successful run by Grooms was negated by a Viking penalty and after an Indian penalty gave Community a third chance for the conversion, the run ultimately failed leaving Sequatchie County with a 16-14 lead.

The Indians increased their lead as Campbell scampered 21 yards for the touchdown to give Sequatchie County a 23-14 lead with 8:44 remaining.

After stopping the Vikings on fourth down, Casey McDaniel scored from 10 yards out to give the Indians a 30-14 advantage with 7:57 left.

A Viking fumble on the ensuing kickoff gave the Indians further momentum and the ball at the Community 28. The Viking defense stiffened as a fourth down Sequatchie County pass play was incomplete.

Community involved its big-play man on its next possession as Stanley hauled in a 71-yard pass from Grooms for a touchdown. The run failed as the Vikings cut the Indian lead to 30-20 with 5:03 left.

An apparent recovery by Stanley on the ensuing onside kickoff did not go the way of the Vikings as the Indians took over possession. Sequatchie County proceeded to increase its lead to 36-20 as Harley Meeks ran eight yards for the score.

The Vikings continued the battle as a 43-yard pass from Grooms to Tyler Sanders set up a 1-yard run by Reid with 33 seconds left to end the scoring.

"We came in wanting to get the run game going which I thought we did," Grooms said. "As we started falling behind and we wanted to score quick, I realized we were getting some things open."

"It left these athletes I've got out here running around with a chance to make plays," Grooms added.

Community will now be idle until October 15 when the Vikings entertain Cannon County for a region game. Game time is 7 p.m.

down came midway through the second stanza when Gavin Donegan hauled in a 31-yard pass from Kade Cunningham. Cunningham carried for the two-point conversion to cut the lead to 13-8.

Lebanon added a 34 yard field-goal before the end of the half to hold a 16-8 advantage at the intermission.

Shelbyville Central attempted two on-side-kicks, the second to start the second half, and both were unsuccessful, Lebanon took advantage of the good field position and scored on a Brandon Martin 10-yard run. The kick after made the score 23-8.

"All week we thought we had something with an onside kick and on the first one we executed it great. The ball was just there on the ground and we couldn't get anyone to fall on it," Puckett said. "Lebanon had some guys that could run there in the back end. We thought we could change the momentum and we didn't."

Anthony Crowell added another touchdown in the third quarter for the Blue Devils.

Cunningham connected on 9-of-23 passes for 175 yards. He rushed for 61 yards on 14 carries.

Laquan Young carried the ball 18 times for 102 yards while Donegan had three catches for 88 yards.

This is a great time to go out and try to grab yourself a bargain, Taurus. Head to a thrift store or garage sale, or even test your negotiation skills at a car dealership.

GEMINI – May 22/Jun 21

Gemini, situations that have slowly been building will finally come to a head this week. A resolution will be better than the roller coaster you have been on recently.

Fall open house held at Clarabell Collectibles

By DAWN HANKINS
dhankins@t-g.com

Clarabell Collectibles on the Shelbyville Public Square held a fall open house Saturday

Kristy Van Buren, a registered nurse from Murfreesboro, was available to field questions about doTERRA essential oils which the shop is now offering. She is a wellness advocate and essential oils educator in addition to her nursing skills.

"doTerra oils are grown and harvested in ideal regions," she explained. "They are beyond organic—free of fillers and foreign contaminants."

Shoppers were treated to snacks and were able to register for door prizes.

Store owners are Angie and Kevin Gunter, who began their collectible shop, which now includes sports memorabilia, last year. The store is named after his father, whose nickname was "Clarabell," due to his quiet demeanor and affectionately after the 1950s era TV show character of the same persona.

States, cities slow to spend federal pandemic money

By DAVID A. LIEB
Associated Press

As Congress considered a massive COVID-19 relief package earlier this year, hundreds of mayors from across the U.S. pleaded for "immediate action" on billions of dollars targeted to shore up their finances and revive their communities.

Now that they've received it, local officials are taking their time before actually spending the windfall.

As of this summer, a majority of large cities and states hadn't spent a penny from the American Rescue Plan championed by Democrats and President Joe Biden, according to an Associated Press review of the first financial reports due under the law. States had spent just 2.5% of their initial allotment while large cities spent 8.5%, according to the AP analysis.

Many state and local governments reported they were still working on plans for their share of the $350 billion, which can be spent on a wide array of programs.

Though Biden signed the law in March, the Treasury Department didn't release the money and spending guidelines until May. By then, some state legislatures already had wrapped up their budget work for the next year, leaving governors with no authority to spend the new money. Some states waited several more months to ask the federal government for their share.

Cities sometimes delayed decisions while soliciting suggestions from the public. And some government officials — still trying to figure out how to spend previous rounds of federal pandemic aid — simply didn't see an urgent need for the additional cash.

"It's a lot of money that's been put out there. I think it's a good sign that it hasn't been frivolously spent," Louisville Mayor Greg Fischer said. He was president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors when more than 400 mayors signed a letter urging Congress to quickly pass Biden's plan.

The law gives states until the end of 2024 to make spending commitments and the end of 2026 to spend the money. Any money not obligated or spent by those dates must be returned to the federal government.

The Biden administration said it isn't concerned about the early pace of the initiative. The aid to governments is intended both "to address any crisis needs" and to provide "longer-term fire power to ensure a durable and equitable recovery," said Gene Sperling, White House American Rescue Plan coordinator.

"The fact that you can spread your spending out is a feature, not a bug, of the program. It is by design," Sperling told the AP.

The Treasury Department set an aggressive reporting schedule to try to prod local planning. It required states, counties and cities with estimated populations of at least 250,000 to file reports by Aug. 31 detailing their spending as of the previous month as well as future plans.

More than half the states and nearly two-thirds of the roughly 90 largest cities reported no initial spending. The governments reported future plans for about 40% of their total funds. The AP did not gather reports from counties because of the large number of them.

To promote transparency, the Treasury Department also required governments to post the reports on a "prominent public-facing website," such as their home page or a general coronavirus response site. But the AP found that many governments ignored that directive, instead tucking the documents behind numerous navigational steps. Idaho and Nebraska had not posted their reports online when contacted by the AP. Neither had some cities.

Officials in Jersey City, New Jersey, required the AP to file a formal open-records request to get its report, though that shouldn't have been necessary. City employees in Laredo, Texas, and Sacramento, California, also initially directed the AP to file open-records requests. Laredo later told the AP it had spent nothing. Sacramento relented and eventually provided a short report stating it had spent nothing but might put its entire $112 million allocation toward replacing lost revenue and providing government services.

Among states, the largest share of initial spending went toward shoring up unemployment insurance trust funds that were depleted during the pandemic. Arizona reported pouring nearly $759 million into its unemployment account, New Mexico nearly $657 million and Kentucky almost $506 million.

For large cities, the most common use of the money was to replenish their diminished revenue and fund government services. San Francisco reported using its entire initial allotment of $312 million for that purpose.

Those reporting no initial spending included Pittsburgh, whose mayor joined with several other Pennsylvania mayors in February on a column urging Congress to pass "crucial" aid for state and local governments.

"Congress must act, and they must act soon. Our communities cannot wait another day," the Pennsylvania mayors wrote.

Pittsburgh ultimately ended up waiting to spend the money until the Treasury guidelines were released, community members had a chance to comment and the City Council could sign off on the spending plans. In the future, the city plans to use part of its federal windfall to buy 78 electric vehicles, build technology labs at recreation centers and launch a pilot project paying 100 low-income Black women $500 a month for two years to test the merits of a guaranteed income program.

The federal money also will help pay the salaries of more than 600 city employees

"Even though the money hadn't technically been expended" by the Treasury Department's reporting timeline, "the receipt of the money was enough for us to hold off on major layoffs," said Dan Gilman, chief of staff to Pittsburgh Mayor William Peduto.

Some officials are intentionally taking their time.

Missouri Gov. Mike Parson, a Republican, opted not to call a special session to appropriate money from the latest federal pandemic relief act. So far, he's publicly outlined just one proposal — $400 million for broadband.

Parson's budget director said the administration will present more ideas to lawmakers when they convene for their regular session in January. Until then, the state should have enough money left from a previous federal relief law to cover the costs of fighting the virus, budget director Dan Haug said.

"We want to try to find things that are going to benefit Missouri not just next year or the year after, but 10 or 20 years down the road," Haug said. "That takes some thought and some planning."

Republican state Rep. Doug Richey, who leads a House panel on federal stimulus spending, said he's not convinced Missouri needs to spend all of its American Rescue Plan funds.
