Cellphone records show murderer's alibi false

This is the second of a two-part story on the brutal murder of Aretenchius "Art" Wainwright III in 2020. The medical examiner said in court last week that it's one of the worst he's recorded.

By TERENCE CORRIGAN
Special to the T-G

Charles Edward Young had from the beginning claimed he was with a girlfriend in Murfreesboro the night Aretenchius "Art" Wainwright was killed. The murder occurred sometime between 8 and 9 p.m. on March 18. He said he was with Charlotte Mason all night, but cellphone records proved that unlikely.

Young

At the time of the murder, his cellphone was making and receiving calls on the north side of Shelbyville. Throughout the day and evening of March 18, there were some 25 phone calls between Mason and Young including calls after 10 p.m. Assistant District Attorney General Randles pointed out that it was an illogical claim by Young that he was with Mason and calling her on the cellphone at the same time.

The accomplice's tale

The most damning testimony against Young was that of his co-defendant Colby Ray Watford.

Watford and Young worked together at WestRock, a cardboard box manufacturer in Murfreesboro. Watford occasionally purchased marijuana from Young. On the day of Wainwright's murder, Watford was fired from his job for refusing to submit to a drug test.

On his way home from work, he testified that he made several phone calls to friends hoping to line up another job. One of the people he called was Young, who he believed owned a construction company.

According to Watford, Young didn't have any construction work for him but he did offer him work collecting $30,000 from someone. Watford said Young told him they would split the proceeds three ways. Watford said, he did not go home from work, but he headed out to meet Young at a Walgreens parking lot.

Young had Watford drive to Shelbyville in Watford's white 2017 Chevy Colorado pickup. He told Watford they couldn't use Young's black Lincoln SUV because the victim would recognize it. On the drive to Shelbyville, Young told Watford that Cristalia Ford was in on the crime and was ensuring that Wainwright would be out of the house between 7 and 8 p.m. Ford reportedly called Young as the drove to Shelbyville. Watford said Young brought a black duffel bag which contained a gas can, ski masks, forearm coverings called sleeves (protective gear worn at the box factory) and gloves. Young was dressed in a dark-colored hoodie, Watford said. Young carried a pistol in the front pouch of his hoodie.

Lying in wait

When they got to Wainwright's Chestnut Drive home, Young directed Watford to drive his pickup truck down the street and park it in the parking lot of an apartment complex. When they entered Wainwright's home, Watford testified, Young stuffed a Playstation 4 video gaming device into his duffel bag. Watford said he started searching the home hoping to find the money and leave before Wainwright returned. His search for cash was unsuccessful but he did find a "big bag of marijuana" which Young put in the duffel bag. They also found an aluminum baseball bat by the front door. "He (Young) handed (the bat) to me…" Watford said, to use on Wainwright if he didn't cooperate.

According to Watford,

MTSU's aerospace is growing

Airport area eyed

By ZOË HAGGARD
zhaggard@t-g.com

Word is out that Middle Tennessee State University's aerospace flight operations are potentially moving from Murfreesboro to Shelbyville. But why is there such a growth in the aerospace program?

"I wouldn't say it's necessarily growing in popularity. It is growing because in the industry itself there's a shortage," said Dr. Chaminda Prelis, MTSU's aerospace department head and assistant professor.

Like many other industry sectors, companies are now experiencing employment shortages after the 2020 pandemic forced many people out of work. Airlines were no different, Prelis said.

"What the airlines did when the pandemic hit and they had to literally shrink their operations — drastically — is they offered early retirements, not just for their pilot but for almost anybody working there... Then, they weren't expecting the sudden 'everybody-wants-to-fly,'" Prelis explained.

Pilots are expected to retire at 65.

'Perfect storm'

To ramp up an airline operation again is difficult. It requires pilots who haven't flown in a while to go through ground training, Prelis explained. This created a "bottleneck" effect.

"Between all that, it was just like a perfect storm," he said.

Prelis began at MTSU last August and admitted it was a drastic change from where he was at the University of Dubuque in Iowa, where there were only about 300 students in the program.

"The increases in complexity and the larger population in students, faculty and staff to work with has been a challenge. But I'm loving every minute of it," Prelis said.

MTSU's aerospace program has around 1,300 students. About 900 of those students are pilots, while around 100 are maintenance, and another 100 are in aviation management. The rest are studying dispatch, drones, and technology.

"I know the focus has always been on pilots, but

Two vehicles stolen, one recovered

By DAVID MELSON
dmelson@t-g.com

One of two vehicles stolen in the past few days has been recovered, according to Shelbyville Police Department reports.

•A 1999 Pontiac Grand Prix was reported stolen Monday from Jose's Garage, North Hillcrest Drive.

The car, last seen Feb. 10, may have been taken by a recent arrival from El Salvador who was hired Feb. 7 and was being allowed to live in the garage.

The suspect had not shown any proof of identification, may not have given his real name and left behind his belongings, the garage's owner told police.

•A 1995 Honda Passport stolen Monday or Tuesday from a Colonial Avenue home was found abandoned on Ridgewood Lane by a Bedford County deputy, a report said. It was returned to its owner.

Drug charges

•A substance police suspect is marijuana was confiscated from a man at an Anthony Lane apartment complex parking lot Thursday.

The complex manager had police check an unfamiliar vehicle. Officer Chris Vest said he smelled a strong marijuana odor coming from its interior.

Ahmed Abdullahi Osman, 23, of Ridgeway Avenue, the driver, allegedly insisted he had CBD, not marijuana, and handed Vest a small plastic bag containing the green leafy substance.

Vest explained CBD must be kept in its original container rather than unmarked bags. A glass jar containing more of the substance was found under the passenger seat.

Osman was charged with possession of a schedule VI drug and released on $2,500 bond.

•An estimated 8.33 grams of marijuana were found on a Shelbyville man during a traffic stop on Madison Street early Wednesday.

Roberto Antonio Orellana, 35, of East Lane Street had the marijuana in his clothing, police said. He allegedly stomped a meth pipe in an attempt to break it after it fell into his lap as he was being searched. The stomp came after an officer's order not to touch the pipe.

Orellana was charged with possession of a schbedule II drug and paraphernalia, tampering with evidence, sixth offense driving on a revoked license, registration violation, and having no insurance. He was held on $17,000 bond.

Shoplifting

Two shoplifters took approximately $80 of beauty supplies from Kim's Beauty Supply, North Main Street, last week.

Police were told Tuesday the women, described as Black and thought to be an aunt and niece from Winchester due to previous contact, were driving an older model red Ford Escape.

They did pay for $110 worth of additional items, the report said.

A long dress and jaw clip were taken from the store Jan. 28. The suspect was described as a white woman in her mid-30s.

Scams

•A phone scammer convinced a Shelbyville woman to reveal personal information and purchase gift cards, Shelbyville police were told Monday.

The victim said she received a call asking about an Amazon purchase she hadn't made. A man claiming he was from the "trade commission" came on the line and instructed her to purchase several $500 gift cards and give them the numbers.

She later notified police after hearing a friend talk about credit card scams.

•A Bedford County man told a deputy a new Facebook friend he'd sent a nude photo threatened blackmail after he refused to give her money.

The woman, who had claimed she was an adult, alleged she was a 15-year-old girl and was going to send his photo and her claim to "the media." He said the woman had sent him a photo of a obviously-adult female she claimed was herself.

Media outlets do not print or broadcast such accusations unless charges have been filed with law enforcement.

Uneasy rider

A school bus rider angry because the driver wouldn't let him off at an unauthorized location caused a ruckus Tuesday afternoon, according to a Shelbyville police report.

Police were dispatched to the intersection of Amos Smith Road and Smithfield Court when a caller claimed a bus driver was holding students hostage.

The driver called her supervisor and parked the bus while awaiting his arrival from the Bedford County Schools bus garage. The boy began cursing the driver, who keyed up the bus's two-way radio so the supervisor could hear him.

The boy's brother walked up to the bus and allegedly attempted to force its doors open. At that time the driver let the boy out; he allegedly punched the front of the bus.

The brother told police and the supervisor he grabbed the sides of the doors but didn't try to open them. The boy denied hitting the bus. No one was immediately charged.

Vandalism

Two men seen frequently on Adams Road have been accused of taking items from a mailbox plus two mailbox markers over the past few weeks, a deputy was told.

The men allegedly walk day and night throwing rocks at mailboxes and goats.

Jail intake

The following were charged since Monday by the Shelbyville Police Department, Bedford County Sheriff's Office, Tennessee Highway Patrol or 17th Judicial District Drug Task Force. They are only charged; guilt or innocence will be determined by the courts.

Mayor Chad Graham seeks re-election

Editor's note:Voter registration deadline is April 4, with early voting April 13-28. The general election is May 3.

When Chad Graham decided to run for the office of Bedford County Mayor in 2018, he had three issues that framed and guided his "Better Bedford" campaign—"Better Education, Better Public Safety and Better Infrastructure." Today, Chad Graham officially announces his re-election campaign for Bedford County mayor, because he wants to "continue the progress he and his administration started just a few years ago."

"As it is with all successful communities, there are many groups, organizations and individuals responsible for making great things happen. I've been so fortunate to be surrounded with caring professionals and concerned citizens that are working extremely hard to make our county a better place to live, raise families, advance careers and fulfill our potential at every level," said Mayor Graham.

He said he's been dedicated to this county his entire life. He was raised here, graduated high school here and served in the U.S. Army before coming home to start his family and transition to Bedford County Emergency Medical Services.

Graham started his career in 1989 as an EMT then graduating from the University of Alabama's Huntsville paramedic program where he advanced to EMS director. He and his wife, Denise, raised their family here and became members of Edgemont Baptist Church.

Graham has served on Bedford County Board of Education, worked in private health care and now, he is serving as county mayor.

Graham believes that his life of service to Bedford County is profound and a "great example of true servant leadership." He wants to continue that service and is seeking re-election.

Below is a partial list of county accomplishments coming from Mayor Graham's first four years in office:

Education:

•New state-of-the-art TCAT facility

• New elementary school "reducing portable classrooms"

•Expansion wing at Community High School

Public Safety:

•Additional staffing to meet growing demand on E911 and EMS systems

•Investing in public safety equipment: emergency vehicles, body Cams, IT, E911 radio system

•New Emergency Management Operation Center

Infrastructure:

•Next Generation Economic Development Model "Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership"

•City-County partnership to expand Industrial Park acreage and establish direct access to Highway 231 N

•TDOT grant to construct road system in the Industrial Park

• Community grants for water and sewer upgrades in both the Industrial Park and rural areas

• Rural broadband expansion through United Communications partnership

• Convenience center equipment upgrades

• New archives facility

Leadership:

• Saved $11 million taxpayer dollars through strategic bond refinancing

• Completed the new Justice Center and Courthouse Annex construction projects

•Secured $14 million in grants for projects such as courthouse renovation, AG center improvements, historic jail renovation and infrastructure expansion.

•Partnered with Meharry Medical College to bring dental services to the underinsured

"Bedford County is growing quickly which means we need to plan for the future," said Graham.

Mayor Graham is fully engaged with county-wide leadership to recruit living wage jobs, improving our schools, maintaining safe neighborhoods and investing in better water, natural gas, sewer and broadband services.

"All of these initiatives will attract a strong middle class, increase our tax base and improve our overall quality of life and place," said Graham.

Mayor Chad Graham also stated, "For many years, our county lagged behind surrounding counties in benefiting from regional economic growth. While we certainly want an improved economic environment, we also don't want to sacrifice our quality of life to unbridled growth, traffic congestion and crime. I believe we have the right approach and now is the time to continue building on our recent successes for the sake of future generations and make Bedford County even better."

Plastic bags

Hints from Heloise

Heloise

Dear Heloise: Plastic pollution is a huge problem for wildlife, not only because animals can become entangled in it or ingest it, but also because it degrades into smaller and smaller pieces. These micro-plastics are found everywhere, from the deepest part of our oceans to our atmosphere. And they cause physiological problems in animals. Please encourage your readers to do their part to try to reduce their use of single-use plastics, including plastic grocery bags. Using reusable bags for shopping helps prevent plastic waste. Thank you so much! -- Julie M. in Colorado

Julie, thank you for sending this info so we can help do our part. -- Heloise

CEREAL FOR BIRDS?

Dear Heloise: The hint that was printed recently regarding putting unwanted breakfast cereal out in the yard for birds was not good info. Birds will fill up on this food, and they won't have room for the food that they naturally eat. Birds should not eat foods designed for humans. Nobody should feed bread to ducks. You can easily find accurate scientific information about this online. I have always enjoyed your column. -- Theresa, E., via email

CARRY RX AND DOCTOR INFO

Dear Heloise: My husband had heart surgery and has other health issues. He now takes many pills a day (some over the counter, some prescription) and sees multiple doctors. I typed a list of his daily pills and dosage amounts on a small piece of paper with the date it was updated.

On the reverse side of that paper, I printed the names and phone numbers of his doctors.

Then we laminated two sets: one for my purse, one for his wallet. I also shared the info with my grown children. It sure makes checking in at the doctors office, pharmacy or ER much easier. -- Mary, Little Rock, Arkansas

Mary, this is so important to have. You and your children can input this info into your smartphones for easy access, too. -- Heloise

SPAM CALLS

Dear Heloise: I read your advice in the Colorado Springs Gazette about not responding "yes" to solicitors who ask, "Can you hear me?" I respond, "This is (my first name)," rather than answer with the usual "hello." Once I realize the call is spam, I hang up and block the number. Also, robocalls are activated by the word "hello," thus there is no response when I answer the phone, "This is Vicki." I also block those numbers. -- Vicki Valdez, via email

WATER CONSERVATION

Dear Heloise: Have you ever noticed that when you wash your hands, you turn on the water, lather up and keep rubbing and wash your hands WITHOUT using the water until you're ready to rinse? You then rinse and turn off the water! Most of the water was not used and went down the drain. You can save gallons of water a week by getting your hands wet, then turning off the water while you lather, and then back on when rinsing. -- George U., via email

FAST FACTS

Lemons on sale? We've got three great ways to use them:

-- Freeze the lemon rinds and use them when you need lemon zest.

-- Squeeze all the juice out of the lemons and freeze it in ice cube trays for later use.

GETTING MY BOOK BACK

Dear Heloise: I love to loan out books I've read, but always had a problem getting them back. Finally, I not only put my name on the front cover of the book, I also wrote under it: "Please return when you are done reading." I used one of my business cards as a bookmark and made sure I left it in the book that was loaned out. Now I get my books back! -- Peggy S., Omaha, Nebraska

BYE-BYE BAD WEATHER

Dear Heloise: In this winter weather when there are so many accidents, I often take the bus to my job site. I walk about half a block from home to the bus stop, wait in a bus shelter and I get off about a block from work. The walk gives me a chance to do some exercise, and the brisk air really wakes me up in the morning. In nice weather I sometimes do the same thing and really only drive if it rains or it's very hot outside. -- Cindy H., via email

Teaching children how to protect birds in your backyard

(StatePoint)

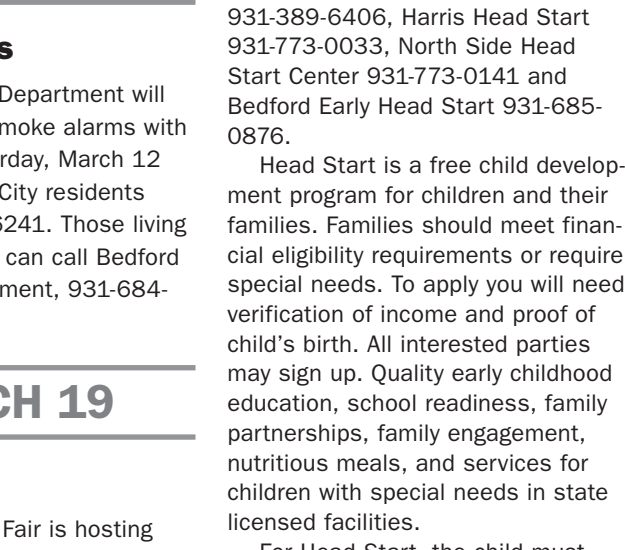
Part of being a good environmental steward is passing on this wisdom to the next generation. Here are three hands-on ways parents and grandparents can teach children to protect the birds in their very own backyard.

Build a Bird Feeder

Build bird feeders using natural or recycled materials to teach two earth-friendly lessons in one: the importance of reducing waste and the need to take care of local wildlife. Bird feeders can be crafted from milk cartons, tin cans, mason jars or even natural materials like pinecones. As you decorate your bird feeders, talk to your kids about how birds are not just beautiful, but also a vital part of the ecosystem and how you are offering these creatures a chance to rest and refuel. Fill your finished products with birdseed and choose a safe spot to hang them. Experts recommend bird feeders be positioned either closer than three feet or farther than 30 feet from windows.

Protect Flight

Birds in flight are prone to strike windows. Fortunately, there's an easy home project you and your children can complete together that will help prevent this from happening. Applying decals that reflect ultraviolet sunlight to your home's windows, particularly windows that are highly reflective of open sky, has been proven to substantially reduce the likelihood of bird strikes. Those from WindowAlert feature patterns that give the appearance of slightly frosted translucent glass, but glow like a stoplight for birds. Kids can help select from fun decal designs like snowflakes, butterflies and maple leaves. The brand also makes a high-tech UV liquid that offers even greater protection when applied between decals. To learn more, visit WindowAlert.com.



Keep a Log

Now that you've invited birds to your yard and have taken steps to protect them, inspire young naturalists to keep a log of flying visitors. Kids can draw pictures of the birds they see and note their observations. Visit Audubon for Kids at audubon.org for a birding guide, activities, games and additional projects that can help kids learn to identify various bird species by sight and sound.

"Environmental stewardship starts in your own backyard and people of all ages can get involved, including kids," says Spencer Schock, founder of WindowAlert. "The good news is that turning your home into a refuge for birds is fun, easy, and something parents, grandparents and kids can work on together."

Students tour the 'Flying Ambulance'

By ZOE HAGGARD
zhaggard@t-g.com

Community High School's health science students recently witnessed firsthand the landing of an Air Evac Lifeteam medical emergency helicopter, dubbed the "flying ambulance."

This is Community's second year for the health science program, taught by Kaycee Martin. It's grown to 50 students, most of whom said they want to go into nursing and other hospital-related careers.

Nurse Lance Dooley, who flew in on the helicopter, answered many of the students' questions, which ranged from jobs hours to pay to required skills.

The job may seem cool, but Dooley, who has been flying with Air Evac Lifeteam for about a year, said it's important for nurses to have a good attitude and for them to be a "go getter" in this kind of field. Paramedic Jeremy Holmes encouraged students to get as much education as possible.

It's safe to say the health science students received a lesson they'll remember for a long time. Getting close to the Air Evac, students could see inside the small one-patient helicopter, which holds just about everything in a hospital room, according to Dooley.

Dooley and Holmes are the medical side of the "flying ambulance." Part of the team is also pilot Jon McVey, who must maneuver the Bell 206 in tight spaces to reach patients. McVey has been flying for 10 years, but he said the most difficult landings are on rooftops, especially when the wind is blowing.

Often patients the Air Evac team serves are suffering from severe trauma. Medical emergencies can be anything from car wrecks to stabbings, according to Rodney Schmiede, an assistant supervisor paramedic for Bedford's EMS. Schmiede said they use the Air Evac Lifeteam more often in the summer as more people are doing recreational activities.

Time determines whether EMS must use the medical helicopter or an ambulance. During emergencies, paramedics try to work in the "golden hour" period, McVey explained. For many patients, the added hour to get to a hospital can be the difference between life and death.

In many ways, the Air Evac is designed for rural communities who are an hour or more away from hospitals, McVey said. A 90-minute drive to Nashville from Unionville can be cut down to 20 minutes, wind and weather permitting, team members explained.

The Air Evac Lifeteam, which has been around for 35 years, has bases in Lewisburg, Manchester, Smyrna, and Waynesboro.

Welcome Pastor
Rev. Andy Keffer

I am originally from Ohio, but felt led to attend Trevecca, where I met my wife Rebecca of 18 years. Rebecca is from Chattanooga, TN and we both consider Tennessee home. Our entire family is involved in ministry together. Rebecca has taught Sunday School, led ladies' events, discipleship groups, volunteered in numerous capacities, and is my biggest supporter and encourager. We have three boys, Isaac (17), Caleb (14) and Elijah (9). I believe whole heartedly that we are called, not just to connect the lost with the church, but to connect the church to the lost in order that they may be connected to the Saving Christ. My family and I are simply seeking God's will. Our desire is to be caught up wherever God is moving and working. We look forward to serving God and His kingdom wherever He may lead.

FIELD TRIPS

Field trips are a big part of local FFA agriculture education at Community.

MANY FACETS OF FFA

Community involvement, education, sports, farming—all facets of the Future Farmers of America (FFA) program at SCHS.

FFA: Developing critical thinking skills

Through career and leadership development events, participating FFA members in grades 7 to 12 are challenged to develop critical thinking skills and effective decision-making skills, foster teamwork and promote communication while recognizing the value of ethical competition and individual achievement. CDE and LDE events occur at the local, state and national levels.

In 2020, the FFA organization offered career and leadership challenges so that members could explore, create and demonstrate skills learned in the areas of agriculture, food, and natural resources. Congratulations to all of the members who have participated in these challenges.

FIGHTING BLAZE, WINDS

Trash being burned in a barrel at the home of Steven Flowers, Highway 64 East, got out of control and spread to an outbuilding and adjoining woods Wednesday. High winds and dry conditions fueled the blaze until Bedford County firefighters brought it under control. The fire narrowly missed a nearby house and the outbuilding was not totally destroyed, firefighters said.

it's not just pilots. There's a huge shortage in mechanics," Prelis said. "And then with the baby boomers retiring, there's plenty of retirements were expecting within the next 15-20 years."

Something else that's helped grow the aerospace department was the increase in pilot pay. According to Prelis, starting salary for pilots 10 years ago was $25,000 to $30,000. Today, base salaries are more like $50,000 to $55,000.

The majority of pilots go into commercial airlines, while others go into charter and cargo, like FedEx. "Even a lot of veterans we get go into commercial airlines," Prelis said. Plus, "there's something sexy and fun about being a pilot."

All these factors have made the aerospace program one of the fastest growing degrees at MTSU. And with growth comes traffic.

Seeking space

The department and university worked with the Murfreesboro airport, where the aerospace program has been since 1952, to figure out the best approach. But Prelis said they couldn't find any solutions.

"Then Shelbyville came up as an option. They have a lot more land — just the airport alone has a lot more land...and they have room to expand with a second runway," Prelis said.

The benefit of moving to Shelbyville would be the space. The local airport had 600 acres, with 25 on Airport Road of which would be leased out to MTSU. However, as of this week, the City of Shelbyville has not yet entered into a formal lease agreement with MTSU.

"I would say the biggest challenge would be the commute for students and even faculty," Prelis said. "The only thing is for students what it would mean for taking classes."

Prelis said they want to minimize the commute by offering more online classes and having staff available to teach Gen-eds on site at the Shelbyville airport.

Total cost to build hangars, classrooms, and runway space would be $62 million to be constructed over the next three years — that is, being optimistic, Prelis said. The decision is still awaiting approval in the legislature.

MTSU President Sidney McPhee's vision is that they have an aerospace satellite campus out at Shelbyville. Prelis said they're still working through all the details, like which programs/classes will move. But flight operations would move to Shelbyville.

This means all airplanes, simulators, dispatch and aircraft maintenance will be moved to the Shelbyville airport.

Right now, MTSU has 30 planes in use, while 10 are on order over the next year. They have Diamond DA40s, which are used as primary trainers, while twin-engine Piper Seminoles are used for multi-engine training. The university's CRJ-700 aircraft simulator trains students to work in a crew environment.

However, with expansion comes more opportunities for students.

New opportunities

"One of the things I've been envisioning for the department is we need to not only talk to the Arnold Air Force Base but also the Space Force," which is expected to move to Alabama. Prelis wants to look at potential majors that the department can provide for students who are interested in going to programs, like SpaceX.

This would include doing more with suborbital space flights and technology/software skills. This would help students meet all their educational needs. Specifically, for MTSU, "The quality of instruction and the quality of staff we have...I would say be one of the biggest attractors," Prelis said. "Most institutions that are large, students become kind of a number. I don't think most students feel that way here. We try to connect with each student."

He further explained, "I would say the primary expectation is we want to continuously offer students a value-added program," Prelis said. "We think that with this new facility we would definitely be able to offer that."

Murder

they waited over a half-hour for Wainwright and Cristalia Ford to return. Young and Watford waited in the kitchen as Wainwright and Ford came into the den. Watford said he entered the den first and Wainwright immediately tackled him. According to Watford, Ford screamed and ran off into another part of the house. With Wainwright on top of him, Watford said he could not use the bat to defend himself. It was then, according to Watford, that Young struck Wainwright "two or three" times in the head with the pistol. Watford said, then Young grabbed the bat and struck him "at least 10 times" in the head with it. Watford said with Wainwright on top of him he couldn't see Young hitting him. "I couldn't see it. I could hear it," Watford said. "He was bleeding really bad, I could smell it." According to Watford, Wainwright briefly lost consciousness and when he came to Young resumed his attack with the bat, demanding to know where the money was hidden. "He (Wainwright) said he didn't know what we were talking about," Watford testified. During the attack in the den, Watford said he searched Wainwright's pockets and found a "wad" of cash (around $1,000) and the keys to his car.

According to Watford, he helped Wainwright walk to the bathroom where the beating continued. They then bound Wainwright's ankles and wrists with duct tape. "He was bleeding extremely bad," Watford said. "He wasn't fighting anymore. It seemed like he was going to die soon, so we left." According to Watford. Young decided to steal Wainwright's car, an Infiniti, "to get some money out of it."

Divvying up the loot

According to Watford, he followed Young, who drove Wainwright's car, for about a half-hour north of Shelbyville to a parking lot of an apartment complex where they divvied up what they had taken. Watford said he got around $400 and 5 ounces of marijuana. As they sat in Watford's pickup in the apartment complex parking lot, Watford testified that Young decided they should burn the Infiniti they stole from Wainwright. They took it to a remote location where Young doused it with gasoline and set it ablaze.

Heading home

After dropping Young off at his car at the Walgreens parking lot where they had met up, Watford said he drove home arriving there at 12:30 a.m. He said, when he got home he found the bat in the back seat of his pickup. In the next few days, Watford testified, he cleaned the interior of his truck with bleach and disposed of the clothes he wore to the crime and the seat covers of his truck. He said he burned his cellphone in a fire pit and disposed of the bat at a recycling center near his home.

"Did your wife know you got fired?" DA Randles said.

"I told her everything as soon as I got home," Watford replied.

"Did you think someone was going to die?" Randles said.

"Not in the beginning," Watford replied.

When Randles asked him if he was responsible for what happened, Watford replied "In a way."

"Do you take responsibility?" Randles said.

"Yes," Watford replied. "I was hoping the EMTs would get there in time."

Watford's wife divorced him following his arrest.

Closing arguments

In his closing statement to the jury, Assistant DA Randles commented on the violent nature of Wainwright's death. "We all want a peaceful death," Randles said. "Art didn't get that. His death was not quick or peaceful. It was horrible, brutal and violent. He got himself to a point of peace. He asked for a drink of water and asked Cristy to call his family. There's one more place we've got to go for Art and that place is justice."

Musings and Memories

Pioneer of the Faith

The last several columns I've written have been to recognize and honor certain missionaries and preachers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ that most of us have never heard of.

They are some of the Unsung Heroes of the Faith.

In this column I would like to focus on another gentleman that followed the Call of Christ to preach the truth of the Good News of Salvation, a freed Georgia slave named George Liele.

George Liele eventually left America and went as a missionary to preach the gospel in Jamaica.

Before he became a free-man in Georgia, Liele became a "free-man" in Christ when he became a Christian in 1773, at the age of 23, and he was baptized by a white pastor.

Sometime after Liele came to Christ, his owner, a man by the name of Henry Sharp, who was a Baptist deacon, gave Liele his freedom so he could pursue God's call on his life.

So as a freed man, Liele preached for two years to the slaves on the plantations surrounding Savannah, Georgia and on into South Carolina.

In 1773, he was instrumental in starting the first Black Baptist Church in North America, a church that still exists today in Savannah, called First African Baptist Church.

On May 20, 1775, George Liele became the first ordained Black Baptist preacher in the American Colonies.

As a result of Liele's godly example and his Spirit anointed preaching, many slaves and freedmen surrendered their lives to Christ.

In 1778, George Liele's friend and former master, Henry Sharp was killed in the Revolutionary War.

Shortly after Sharp's death, his heirs, seeing George Liele's notoriety, tried to re-enslave him. As a result, Liele was thrown into prison.

Eventually, Liele was able to produce the proper documents showing he was a legitimately freed man, and he was eventually released from jail

Soon after Liele's release, Colonel Moses Kirkland of the British army, befriended Liele and helped him and his family leave the country.

Bedford County Schools: A 'Best for All District'

Just recently, the Tennessee Department of Education announced Bedford County Schools (BCS) is a 'Best for All District,' joining 67 other districts across the state earning this designation. Chosen districts efficiently used financial, operational, celebratory, and resource benefits-those federal COVID-19 relief and stimulus funds which were to be earmarked for student achievement and for improving academic outcomes.

Tracy Watson: Principal of the Year

And what's expected for Thomas Magnet

By ZOË HAGGARD
zhaggard@t-g.com

In her fourth year as principal, Thomas Magnet's Tracy Watson received Bedford County's Principal of the Year award.

"Honestly, I just have a really good faculty and staff from the top down. They make the job easy," Watson said. Qualifications for the award included being in administration for three years and then being voted on by supervisors and principals.

A product of the Bedford County School System herself, Watson says she couldn't imagine living anywhere else. "I love the small town feel...and it's just being able to be around my family and my church that I love being here," she said.

"I think it's a very warm, welcoming environment in all the schools."

Watson worked as a teacher's assistant while getting her master's in school counseling, which she said was a great prepper for what she does now.

"It's very similar, being able to talk to people and being a problem solver and mediator. A lot of times, if a child is having a difficult day, it's not about behavior, it's about something else."

Having worked with students who are dealing with trauma or difficult homelife, Watson says it's better for principals to look at the big picture.

"You have to have a lot of empathy and compassion and be able to take multiple perspectives...because every child is different; every day is different," she said.

Doing so brings a whole new level to "being called to the principal's office."

"I promise you, the children are never terrified of me," Watson said with a laugh.

Thomas expands magnet program

Also having worked with other principals, Watson said a principal needs to be organized and have good time management.

"You just have to accept that you're never going to finish and that'll you'll have to pick back up. And that's okay," she said.

And there's a lot going on at Thomas Magnet in the upcoming school years. Namely, the kindergarten through fifth grade magnet school is looking to expand their school to include sixth grade and even possibly seventh and eighth.

"Our goal is to continue to grow as well as increase those opportunities for our older students, like higher honors classes and incorporating science, technology, arts into the program to help them become a more well-rounded student," said Watson.

Watson says right now they're looking at what space they have at the Thomas Magnet school. They also need to create a focus since the elementary system will look different at a middle school level.

"We want the kids to still feel a part, but we also want them to feel like they're stepping up into middle school," Watson said. From creating a different behavior incentive program to creating dances to enabling higher level math and science, Watson said they have to tailor the magnet school style program to fit the middle school lifestyle.

Watson said the question is: "Can you continue their learning versus being in an environment where they may not have the same opportunities?"

Tuesday's regular school board meeting approved Thomas Magnet's ability to expand to include middle school, making it a "true magnet school," according to Bedford County Director of Schoos Tammy Garrett.

"Bottom line; It's best for some kids. We have to find ways to target the top quintile," said Garrett. "A magnet school is not best for all students, but it is best for some students...It is my opinion if we do not provide as many opportunities for our students as we possibly can, it will destroy public education."

Garrett said an expansion of the school to eventually include 7th and 8th would cost an estimated $4.5 million, according to Mark Kline of Kline-Swinney Associates, the county's architect.

Tailoring education

Demographically, TMS tries to target the higher-achieving students and push them even higher, according to Watson.

However, sometimes that can be difficult because that may not translate just to the academics. For example, kids who are average in the academic classroom might need more challenges that can appease their learning style.

"We try to meet kids where they are," Watson said.

With 345 kindergarten through 5th grade students, Thomas Magnet's student to teacher ratio is approximately 1:20, according to Watson.

It's important that TMS has multiple extra-curricular activities, like broadcasting news, STEM, and even boardgame clubs. "Stream Days," which the school has once a month, relates a topic for classrooms to pursue in a project. Recently, 5th graders worked on 2-D animal habitats. Projects like this encourage independent research and art and let students have autonomy, Watson said.

"I think that all of our schools do find a way to do this through clubs, related arts to encourage creativity," Watson said. Programs must evolve with the students and with the community, according to Watson.

"We want to impact positively the community around us...because we have plenty of children that are very bright in Bedford County, but I don't know if they recognize the opportunity there is," said Watson.

TMS is accepting open enrollment until February 25.

Liele repaid his debt to Kirkland, and he obtained a certificate of freedom for himself and his family.

He and his wife, Hannah, and their four children left Savannah and landed in Kingston, Jamaica, in 1782.

Back when the Lieles arrived in Jamaica it was a British colony; but soon, Liele found land to preach on and he found an enslaved people who needed a missionary for Jesus Christ.

The slaves were brought from Africa to Jamaica to work on the sugar plantations. These men and women didn't know about Jesus Christ and the Christian message of love and hope and forgiveness, so George and Hannah began to teach and preach the gospel to them.

Soon the Lieles started a church, and they held baptism services every three months.

These baptisms were made public events and those professing Christ were baptized in the nearby ocean or river. Large crowds would gather to witness the events.

It wasn't long and the work of this Black Church and the public baptisms gained a lot of attention which led to periods of persecution.

Eventually, George Liele was charged with "preaching sedition" and he was arrested and placed in prison.

He was later acquitted of the charges, and he was once again released.

Despite facing these hostilities, during the eight years of preaching, he was able to baptize 500 people and establish a strong church there in Jamaica.

Not only did Liele's ministry have a spiritual impact on the island, but his work also made a social difference for the Jamaican slaves. By July 31, 1838, slavery was eradicated in Jamaica.

In 1814, there were only about 8,000 Baptists in Jamaica. This number included slaves, freedmen, and some white people.

However, as a result of George Liele's ministry, by 1832 there were over 20,000 professing believers in Jesus Christ on the island of Jamaica.

Liele was an anointed preacher, church planter, missionary, evangelist, and a great disciple-maker. He was known for encouraging his converts to go themselves and preach the gospel to the lost.

As a result of the leadership of George Liele, Jamaican missionaries were sent to Savannah, Georgia in America; to Nova Scotia in Canada; and to Sierra Leone in Africa.

The Rev. Adoniram Judson is often called the first Baptist missionary from the United States; but, in all reality, this designation belongs to a former slave by the name of George Liele, the black man who earned the name of "Negro slavery's prophet of deliverance."

George Liele died in in Jamaica in 1828. However, by 1887 the number of Jamaican churches had grown to a membership of 31,000 as a result of George's ministry.

He may have begun his life as a slave, but he lived as a free man in Christ. He left a rich legacy of thousands who were transformed by the good news of Jesus Christ.

Christian author, David Shannon, summed up Liele's life of ministry this way: "The Christianity practiced by Liele was not limited to one nation, colony, or ethnic group but was a faith found and spread through interaction with colonists and national leaders in the Americas and England.

"In turn, this broad vision of Christianity shaped and spread a variety of Christian experience that became widespread and influential in black, white, and integrated congregations in Georgia, South Carolina, Jamaica, Nova Scotia, Sierra Leone, and beyond."

His story is an important part of the history of Christian missions and George Liele is worthy of recognition and honor.

Reeky Rat is offering forest citizens his junk removal services. The rat says he will haul away paper products for twenty-five cents per pound and metal objects for fifty cents per pound because they're a heavier load than paper for the landfill's cost-per-pound dumping fee. Slylock Fox thinks Reeky Rat's offer stinks. Why?

Solution -- Reeky lied. One pound of metal is no heavier than one pound of paper. A pound is a pound no matter what the material is.

Champs punch ticket to 7-AA title clash

By CHRIS SIERS
sports@t-g.com

UNIONVILLE — Last season, the Cascade Champions went on a tear through the month of January and locked up the No. 1 seed in the District 8-A tournament, but suffered a semifinal loss to Fayetteville City.

With the goal of winning a district title within reach again, the Champs left no doubts on the floor and took care of business against Grundy County (14-12) in the District 7-AA semifinals on Tuesday night.

Cascade (21-7) got big production from junior Lucas Clanton and senior Justis Carter in the 65-46 win over the Yellow Jackets.

Grundy County jumped out to the early lead and after leading 8-4 with 6:07 left in the first, Cascade rattled off 10-straight points and by the end of the first quarter, led 20-12.

While the Champs exerted their will on the Yellow Jackets in the opening quarter, the offensive production was a struggle in the second quarter as Cascade was only able to muster up seven points.

Grundy County knocked down a pair of timely 3-pointers by Gavin Hobbs, which helped the Yellow Jackets cut Cascade's lead to three points by halftime.

Cascade answered with a 23-point effort in the third quarter.

When Cascade was at its best, the Champions were able to force several Yellow Jacket turnovers and push the ball in transition to help break the game open.

"We talked about halftime how we had gotten kind of sluggish. We were a little bit tight. We had a couple of shots that didn't fall. We wanted to push it in transition a little bit more. Eventually we kind of got that going," Cascade coach Chris Lawson said.

While Cascade was able to pick up some key baskets off Grundy County turnovers, it was the support staff that shined in the third quarter.

Carter picked up his third foul early in the third quarter, prompting Lawson to turn to the deep Champion bench.

With the senior Champion big man battling foul trouble, it was Saebyn Burris who gave Cascade big minutes in the paint and Chance Brown who came through with some key baskets in the third quarter to help the Champs extend their lead.

"Chance Brown was huge for us tonight. Saebyn Burris was huge for us tonight. Lucas (Clanton) got hot and had a pretty good night. He and Justis give us what they typically give us, but to have those other guys step in, that's the difference," Lawson said.

With Burris and Brown were able to give the Champs big minutes, it was Clanton who was shooting lights out in the second half.

UNIONVILLE — In the closing seconds of Tuesday night's District 7-AA semifinal against Forrest, Maki Fleming and Stratton Lovvorn connected on some key free throws to land the Purple and Gold a 50-47 win.

Tuesday night's win over the Rockets (10-15) was the third by the Vikings (14-14) this season, it was the closest margin of victory, with both prior wins being double-digit victories.

"When you play somebody three times, everybody knows the old adage, it's just hard to do. In a tournament atmosphere, you're going to get their best. Forrest has gotten better and they're playing really good basketball," Viking coach Robbie Davis said.

While it was a pair of back-to-back one-and-one attempts in the final five seconds that ultimately won it for Community, some timely baskets in the second half by senior Trace Broiles helped put

Eagles shock Rebs in 6-4A

By GARY JOHNSON
gjohnson@t-g.com

In a huge upset that was heard across the mid-state, No. 4 Shelbyville Central claimed a 57-54 win over top-seed Franklin County in the opening round of the District 6-AAAA Tournament on Tuesday evening at the Rick Insell Gymnasium.

The Golden Eagles had lost the three previous regular season games to the Rebels, with the last matchup going to double overtime last week.

Shelbyville Central will face Coffee County in the district tournament championship on Saturday night at 7:30 at home.

The Eagles were 1-7 in regular season district play.

"Super proud of my guys. They battled the entire night and found a way to win," Shelbyville Central first-year head coach Kody Howard said.

"Every single player contributed to our win tonight, as well as our student section. They showed up and gave us that extra juice to cross the finish line."

The game was marred with a lot of fouls called on

He scored a game-high 23 points and hit five second-half 3-pointers.

With Cascade pulling away in the second half, Grundy's key source of offense came from Austin Higgins, who pitched in a team-best 19 points.

Aside from Higgins, Grundy struggled to find support from the rest of the lineup.

"Our focus was on a couple other guys for them. We didn't really try to focus on him (Higgins) as much. So he made a couple of shots, but we also talked about sticking with the game plan and it worked out," Lawson said.

Carter went on to finish the game with 14 points, while Burris and Brown added eight and seven, respectively.

With the ghosts of the 2021 district tournament semifinals exorcised, Cascade's focus now shifts to the district championship game against Community on Saturday night.

For the first time since 2013, Cascade will face the Vikings in the postseason, with Community winning the two previous tournament meetings.

In two regular season games this season, the two Bedford County titans split games, with the Vikings winning a January 20 meeting on a last-second shot, while Cascade took care of business eight days later in a 44-32 win.

"We want to win a district championship. We've worked all year to get to this point. It will be a competitive and tough game," Lawson said.

Tip-off is set for 7:45 on Saturday evening in Unionville.

The Eagles posted leads of 9-8 at the end of the opening frame, 17-12 at the intermission and were up 38-32 after three periods.

The game remained close throughout the fourth quarter and the Rebels did tie the score at 52-52 late in the game but Devyn Heath and Tim Parsons came up big at the charity stripe to secure the win.

Jason Ragland pitched in a game-high 21 points to lead the winners while Heath added 16 markers.

Kaleb Rigsby netted 14 and KeAndre Johnson and Kai Baker followed with a dozen points apiece to pace Franklin County.

"I can't wait to see everyone in Shelbyville Saturday night for the championship. Be early and be loud," Howard said. "Go Eagles!"

the Vikings in position to make plays at the end of the game.

"Some kids stepped up tonight. I want to point out Trace Broiles. He had three three-pointers in the second half," Davis said.

Broiles' biggest shot of the night broke a 47-all tie with 3:14 left in the game.

Community did not trail again.

While never truly able to pull away, the Rockets utilized an effective 1-3-1 zone defense that gave the Vikings fits with consistency on the offensive end of the court on Tuesday.

"We were trying to get guys in position to just basically overload it. The thing is, we even talked about it in practice where we wanted to take the back side guy completely out of the play," Davis said.

"They're good at what they do. With that 1-3-1, they will definitely catch some fits with whoever they catch in the region."

While able to connect on baskets sporadically, Forrest was able to keep it a one-possession game for virtually the entirety of the second half.

Trailing 37-35 after three quarters, Forrest opened the fourth on a six-point run, including back-to-back baskets by Hunter Bennett, to lead 41-37 with 6:35 left.

Community answered with a six-point run of its own, highlighted by a Broiles 3-pointer to give Community a 42-41 lead with 5:41 left.

After Bennett tied the game at 47 on a basket with 3:14 left, Forrest's Davin Porter saw a shot bounce out of the rim with 1:11 to go.

From there, Community held possession until the 14-second mark and called a time out.

It was the following play that Maki Fleming was able to drive the paint, draw a foul, and get to the line for a one-and-one attempt.

After Fleming connected on both attempts, the Rockets opted for a timeout of their own with five seconds to go.

On the following inbound attempt, it was Lovvorn who came up with a turnover and drew the foul, giving the Vikings another one-and-one opportunity.

While he hit the front end of the free throw attempts, the Rockets were able to corral the rebound on the second attempt and it was Deason Jones who fired off a 45-footer that nearly sent the game to overtime.

While any postseason win is a good win, Davis said the experience his young squad gained in Tuesday's tournament atmosphere will be invaluable moving forward.

"This was the first time these guys, other than Stratton and Maki, have been in an atmosphere like this. The tournament process was big," Davis said.

As a team, the Vikings finished 8-of-13 at the free throw line, but were 3-of-4 in the fourth quarter.

Bennett and Porter combined for 30 points to lead the Rockets, but it was Community's big three that came through in the clutch.

Lovvorn led the Vikings with 13 points, while Fleming added 10.

Broiles connected on three of the Vikings' six treys in the contest and finished with nine points.

The win advances the Vikings to the 7-AA championship game where the No. 1 seed Cascade Champions await.

Cascade defeated Grundy County 65-46 in the other semifinal.

The two Bedford County teams are no strangers to each other and meet in the postseason for the first time since 2013, with the Vikings winning the prior two postseason meetings.

With the near-10-year drought of playing Cascade over, Davis said the renewal of this rivalry with postseason implications is a big impact on the landscape of county athletics.

"When they redrew the districts and we saw where we're going to be with Cascade, this is what we need. This place will be loud," he said.

Community will face No. 1 Cascade in the 7-AA championship on Saturday at 7:45.

UNIONVILLE — The Community Viqueens took control early with the help of a strong inside game and some timely outside shooting as the Viqueens defeated the Cascade Lady Champions 61-33 in a semifinal game of the District 7-AA tournament Monday night.

After the Lady Champions scored the first bucket of the game, Community (21-7) took charge and never took the foot off the pedal.

M.J. Simmons and Breanna Whitaker each scored seven points while Addison Brothers added five as the Viqueens scored the next 22 points and led 22-2 after one quarter.

It was Simmons on the inside and Whitaker on the outside as Community upped its lead in the second quarter. Simmons netted 12 points and Whitaker added seven as the Viqueens scored the first seven points of the quarter to complete a 29-0 run.

Cascade had four players score as the Viqueens took a 43-11 lead into the intermission.

Simmons added six points in the third quarter as the Viqueens kept the pressure on. Community outscored the Lady Champions 12-2 and carried a 55-13 advantage to the final quarter.

The Viqueens scored the first field goal before Cascade got hot.

Abrielle Presley scored seven points while Abby Harris had six points and Sophie Ray added five as the Lady Champs enjoyed their best output of the night and used a 14-0 run to outscore the Viqueens 20-6 as substitutes from both teams saw plenty of action.

Simmons scored 25 points and Whitaker had 14 to lead the Viqueens.

Ray, Presley, and Caroline Stone each scored seven points to lead the Lady Champs.

The Viqueens were 15-of-21 at the free throw line while Cascade was 5-of-7.

"We wanted to set the tone and we wanted to start well on both sides of the court," Coach Cody Pierce of the Viqueens said.

"We didn't like how we played Friday, so I told them you need to come out and set the tone and keep it that way," Pierce added. "I feel like we did that."

Eaglettes fall to Warren Co. in 6-AAAA tourney opener

After battling from the start, Shelbyville Central's Golden Eaglettes saw Warren County pull away midway in the fourth quarter in a 56-42 loss in the opening round of the District 6-AAAA Tournament at Rick Insell Gymnasium on Monday night.

The Eaglettes returned to tournament action on Friday evening against Franklin County in the consolation round.

Warren County faced top seed Coffee County in the championship game Friday.

The Eaglettes jumped out to a 9-2 lead and were in control 11-2 at the 4:52 mark of the opening frame after back-to-back baskets by Jaleigha Harris and Paige Blackburn, on the way to a 14-8 advantage at the end of the quarter.

"We got off to a great start but foul trouble took its toll on us," Eaglette coach Kyle Turnham said.

"I've preached for two days to drive the ball against them (Warren County) and get the ball inside to Lilly (Brown). We didn't do either anywhere near enough and settled for too many 3-point shots. Shooting 2-of-17 from the 3-point line won't win us many games."

Warren County regrouped to post a 26-20 lead at the intermission and was in control 38-29 going into the fourth quarter.

Shelby Smartt led the winners with 19 points.

Kyra Perkins added 14.

Harris finished with 15 points with Blackburn collecting a dozen to lead Shelbyville Central.

"It's a huge game and we still have a lot to play for," Turnham said of Friday's matchup.

Threat to MLB openers increases

By RONALD BLUM
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — The threat to opening day on March 31 appeared to intensify Thursday when the drawn-out talks to end Major League Baseball's lockout ended just 15 minutes after they resumed following a four-day break.

What was supposed to be the second day of spring training workouts instead was the 78th day of the second-longest work stoppage in baseball history. After just the sixth meeting on core economics since the lockout began Dec. 2, the sides had differing interpretations of the brevity: The union didn't read much into the short session, and management attributed the lack of length to having nothing to talk about.

"I'm pretty sure I've had at bats longer than this meeting," New York Mets infielder Luis Guillorme tweeted.

While there is a session scheduled for Friday on non-core issues, there is no set date for the resumption of the main talks. The sides have about two weeks left to reach a deal that would allow sufficient spring training ahead of an on-time opening.

"I just hope something gets resolved quickly," Yankees infielder DJ LeMahieu said before the meeting, just after working out with teammate Aaron Judge at a college field in Tampa, Florida. "Baseball becomes a business — it's not as fun, but it's something that definitely needs to happen."

At this point, MLB has not even acknowledged publicly that exhibition openers won't come off as scheduled on Feb. 26. The union told MLB it was prepared to meet every day next week.

There was no discussion of key issues such as luxury tax thresholds and rates, the minimum salary, the union's proposal to decrease revenue sharing and the players' allegations of service time manipulation. The sides remain far apart in all those areas and also differ on the postseason: Owners want to expand the playoffs from 10 teams to 14, while players are offering 12.

Still, the union's change in arbitration moved the sides closer in structure for when they actually start intensive negotiations. Without the imminent threat of losses caused by missing regular-season games, both sides appear hesitant to reveal bottom-line positions.

Deputy Commissioner Dan Halem, Executive Vice President Morgan Sword and Senior Vice President Patrick Houlihan made the five-minute walk from MLB's West Midtown office to the players' association's East Midtown workplace on an usually warm winter afternoon.

Sword and Houlihan left shortly after they arrived, and Halem remained for a 20-minute, one-on-one meeting with Bruce Meyer, the union's chief negotiator. That talk was described as unusually candid.

Negotiators on both sides planned to discuss the state of the talks with their constituencies.

The union dropped its request to lower salary arbitration eligibility to two years of major league service, its level from 1974-86. Instead, players proposed the so-called super-two group be expanded to the top 80% by service time among those with at least two years but less than three from 22%, its level since 2013.

Elusive Daytona 500 'top of the to-do list' for Busch

By MARK LONG
AP Sports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Kyle Busch makes no excuses for his Daytona 500 failures.

His fortunes at NASCAR's most famous track are filled with bad luck, bad timing and maybe even a few bad decisions. Busch is winless in 16 starts in NASCAR's season opener, a losing streak that's more of a head-scratcher than a heartbreaker.

After all, the two-time Cup Series champion has won at just about every stop on NASCAR's racing circuits. He's even partied in victory lane at Daytona International Speedway, just not following the 500. He won the July race at Daytona in 2008. He has also celebrated poles, topped exhibition events and even won here in other series.

But the ultimate prize at NASCAR's ultimate track has eluded him, maybe even gnawed at him, for his entire professional career.

He gets a chance to end the skid Sunday in the 64th running of "The Great American Race."

"It's at the top of the to-do list," Busch said. "That box has not yet been checked, so it's the top one. I don't think there's anything else higher than that, not even close to as high as that."

Busch has 222 wins across NASCAR's top three series, with 59 of those coming at the top-tier Cup level. He has taken his traditional bows, along with the standard boos, at tracks from Homestead to Sonoma, from New Hampshire to Fontana, and just about everywhere in between. He has won eight times at Bristol and six times at Richmond.

Daytona, though, has remained just out of reach.

"When we check that box, where does it stack in regards to career accomplishments? I mean, it's going to be near the top. I don't know if it's as much as the championship, but it's definitely going to be top of race wins for sure.

"It's a big win, would love to be able to accomplish that. I don't want to make excuses, but there's a lot of guys that have been greats in our sport that did not win that race. So I would not like to go down as one of those guys. But we'll work hard to make sure that doesn't happen."

Hall of Fame driver David Pearson needed 15 tries to win the Daytona 500. Big brother Kurt Busch needed 16. Tony Stewart never won the race in 17 starts. Likewise, Rusty Wallace and Mark Martin retired without winning it.

NASCAR legend and seven-time Cup champ Dale Earnhardt won in his 20th try, a victory that was celebrated by just about everyone in the garage.

Busch won't be that kind of sentimental favorite. His ability to win in any series and on every type of track makes him one of the guys to beat every week, but he's never been an overly popular driver.

Heck, his Daytona 500 skid isn't even the longest current one in the garage or on his team. Martin Truex Jr. is 0 for 17 in the 500.

Busch has been close plenty of times, including a few unforgettable finishes.

In 2008, Busch's first season at Gibbs, Team Penske drivers Ryan Newman and Kurt Busch steamrolled past Busch and Stewart just a few hundred yards from the finish line. Busch finished third in 2016 and sandwiched in the middle of a 1-2-3 sweep for JGR in 2019.

And just last year, Busch was running near the front when Penske teammates Joey Logano and Brad Keselowski made contact on the final lap and took him out, along with a chunk of the field.

"I've been in prime position to win it late in the race and just circumstances happen," Busch said. "I've been oh so close, really near the end of a run or end of the race, and just haven't been able to get it done. It'll happen when it happens. You can't force it.

"You can be running third and spin somebody and win. Or you can be running fourth and have the top three get caught up in a wreck and win. So really you just have to try to dodge the wreck at the end because we all know that's inevitable. It's going to happen."

Gordon comfy in new role at Hendrick

By DAN GELSTON
AP Sports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Jeff Gordon called NASCAR races for Fox when his old boss popped in for a visit and left behind a note. Rick Hendrick had good-naturedly posted hours of his 12-plus-hour work days for his former star driver. Those are the grueling demands of the job when you own more than 100 car dealerships and have your name on the winningest organization in stock car history.

"I knew I could never live up to that," Gordon said, laughing.

Now look at Gordon.

For the first time in his 50 years, Gordon jokes that he finally has a real job (minus the TPS reports). Yes, he has an office and a desk and if he needs to punch a clock, well, Gordon could start with one of the nine grandfather clocks he won at Martinsville.

And his day starts as soon as the working dad drops his two kids off at school.

Gordon has settled into his daily role at Hendrick Motorsports as the new vice chairman and the second-ranking team official to the 72-year-old Hendrick. The move positioned Gordon to one day succeed Hendrick and run the operation. The real-world gig for the four-time champ already came with an early performance review from Hendrick.

"He's showing up on time with his game-face on," Hendrick said.

Whew! Next stop, employee of the month.

Few drivers ever showed up in the big moments quite like Gordon. He won 93 races — third on the career list — and four Cup titles before retiring in 2015. He won the Daytona 500 in 1997, 1999, and 2005.

Gordon now has a hand in all aspects at Hendrick, from competition meetings and marketing to securing sponsorship and social media ideas. He's a mentor of sorts to Hendrick's four Cup drivers -- defending champion Kyle Larson, 2020 champion Chase Elliott, William Byron and Alex Bowman. And why not? Gordon blended wild success with off-track celebrity like no other driver before him (and maybe since). Gordon has encouraged the drivers to step out of their professional comfort zone and find new ways they could promote themselves and the sport.

Gordon should know how to stretch beyond racing. He hosted "Saturday Night Live," voiced multiple cartoon characters, and acted in various TV shows, movies and commercials.

"If the drivers are growing their following, then likely the sport is benefiting from it, too," Elliott said. "I think he's just trying to help everybody win."

Winning is still what Hendrick does best.

Hendrick swept the front row for Sunday's Daytona 500 with Larson on the pole and Bowman starting outside. It was the seventh pole in the last eight Daytona 500s for Hendrick.

The team's dominance was launched by Gordon, handed off to seven-time champion Jimmie Johnson and could seemingly continue for decades. Hendrick said he was close to signing Byron and Elliott to contract extensions and hoped both drivers — like Gordon — would finish their careers with the organization.

Gordon, the face of NASCAR as it exploded in popularity in the 1990s, had an equity stake in Hendrick Motorsports since 1999, and his interest in the business side of the sport only grew, even as he called races in the Fox Sports booth. So did his realization he wasn't done making a difference at Hendrick.

"I always thought if I'm not the one driving the car, then the championships or wins won't mean as much," Gordon said. "I beg to differ. I think in some ways that it's as rewarding, in other ways even more rewarding, because I'm connecting with Rick."

Gordon wanted more than a seat at the table. He needed more seats in the pit box after he was squeezed out at the championship race last season.

Did he get some?

"Oh, yeah," he said.

Of course he did.

For a driver who mastered the Bricks at Indy -- he's a five-time Brickyard 400 winner -- Gordon will soon show off his skills with Lego bricks. Gordon and Byron are set to guest this season on an episode of "Lego Masters." Byron is a master builder — he flashed his handiwork on Manchester United's Old Trafford stadium — while Gordon insisted he's much more of a novice.

"I can only pull the instructions out of the box," he cracked.

He already helped design the blueprint to build a dynasty at Hendrick

Keselowski leads Jack Roush back to Daytona's victory lane

By JENNA FRYER
AP Auto Racing Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Brad Keselowski took Jack Roush to victory lane for the first time since 2017 as their rebranded team showed its ready for the Daytona 500.

Keselowski and Chris Buescher won the 150-mile qualifying races at Daytona International Speedway on Thursday night to put them side-by-side starting from the second row in NASCAR's sold-out, season-opening spectacular.

"We have good hot rods here," Buescher said. "They are fast and they handle good. I knew we were in good shape that whole race."

He won the race on the 60th and final lap of the second qualifying race for the Daytona 500 when leader Joey Logano wrecked trying to block Buescher's run. Logano, who was visibly angry after wrecking his Team Penske Ford, said he misjudged Buescher's closing rate.

"Driver screwed up. That's really all there is to it," Logano said. "It's my fault. It stinks because it tore up our car and kind of puts us in a spot as a race team. It's just a dumb mistake."

Across the speedway, Logano's former Penske teammate was making his second trip to victory lane of the night.

Keselowski celebrated a huge first night of Daytona racing as both the team owner and its driver. He left Penske in November for an ownership stake of Roush's organization — now called RFK Racing for Roush Fenway Keselowski — and is now driver of Roush's flagship and original No. 6 Ford.

He has a long-term vision for RFK and its not a quick fix to get the team back among the NASCAR elite. And yet Keselowski won the first qualifying race and obviously has a fast car for the Daytona 500.

Keselowski said the night was critical for creating a culture that expects to win at RFK, which last won a Cup race in 2017 with Ricky Stenhouse Jr. at this track.

"There's a lot of guys and gals on my team that have never won a race before. The company hasn't won a race in five? Six years now? That's any kind of race," Keselowski said. "It's really important to get that winning habit built up, and the only way you can really do that is to go win. That builds confidence in each other and builds expectations."

Keselowski and Buescher will start Sunday behind NASCAR champion Kyle Larson and his Hendrick Motorsports teammate Alex Bowman. The Chevrolet drivers locked down the front row in Wednesday night time trials.

Floyd Mayweather Jr. will make his NASCAR debut Sunday when The Money Team Racing starts the Daytona 500. Kaz Grala drove the No. 50 Chevrolet into the race with a pass of J.J. Yeley on the final lap of the first race.

Six teams came to Daytona battling for four "open" spots in Sunday's 40-car field. Two spots were filled in time trials — former Formula One champion Jacques Villeneuve will make his Daytona 500 debut, as will Noah Gragson for Beard Motorsports — and one spot was available in each of the two qualifying races.

Grala earned one of them with a pass for 18th on the final lap of the first race. NY Racing, a team owned by Black entrepreneur John Cohen, raced its way into the Daytona 500 in the second race. The team pulled Greg Biffle out of semi-retirement and at 52, Biffle will be the oldest driver in the field Sunday when he makes his 15th career Daytona 500 start.

Grala said "the word on the street" was that his boss Mayweather would be at Daytona International Speedway on Sunday, but the team face-timed with the retired boxer from the starting grid.

"He was so pumped up about it. He was ready, jacked up and really confident in us," Grala said. "That was a cool pep talk to get, not one that I've ever gotten before. Definitely a cool moment for us and having that validation that he's excited about this program."

The 500 has been sold out for about a month with an expected crowd Sunday of more than 120,000 that Grala predicted would woo Mayweather. The Money Team plans just a partial schedule this season.

"He's really going to get obsessed with this," Grala said.

Roush had won a Daytona qualifier only once before, in 2012 when Matt Kenseth won both the short race and then the 500.

But their Fords are among a group of clearly superior Mustangs who strategized their racing plans and worked together. Keselowski led Ford to a sweep of the top four spots in the first race; Buescher gave Ford a podium sweep with his win, and Logano had made it four Fords at the front before his crash.

Larson led a race-high 34 laps from the pole, but finished seventh. He will lead the field to green Sunday in the debut of NASCAR's new Next Gen car.

The racing Thursday night was extremely conservative until Logano's last-lap block — because of the slow rollout of the Next Gen, the car missed its initial deadline by a year because of the pandemic — teams simply don't have enough race cars.

Everything is purchased now and teams aren't building their own stuff anymore. With cars so hard to come by at the start of the season, few have backup cars in Daytona. It meant everyone had to race fairly safe to save their car for the 500.

"It stinks because it tore up our car and kind of puts us in a spot as a race team," Logano said.

After skating debacle, Bach takes rare shots at Russians

By GRAHAM DUNBAR
AP Sports Writer

BEIJING — IOC President Thomas Bach joined the global bandwagon of support for Russian figure skater Kamila Valieva on Friday, criticizing her entourage and questioning whether 15-year-old athletes should be put under such pressure at the Olympics.

His tone surprised Olympic observers — accustomed to hearing Bach defend Russian athletes despite the massive 2014 doping scandal — and drew a quick rebuke from Moscow.

Valieva's emotional breakdown after a mistake-strewn skate and unforgiving questioning by her coach made millions of viewers cringe, especially after a week-long drama over her positive drug test. Bach said he felt the same way, spending much of his news conference taking rare swipes at Russia.

"I was very, very disturbed yesterday when I watched the competition on TV," Bach said at an Olympics that began with Vladimir Putin sitting in the VIP section at the opening ceremony despite a Russian troop buildup near the Ukraine border.

Bach had direct criticism of Valieva's entourage, saying they showed "a tremendous coldness, it was chilling to see this."

The IOC leader did not mention Eteri Tutberidze, though he clearly targeted the preeminent coach of Russia's dominant women's figure skating program.

Bach's words got him into a testy exchange with a Russian reporter. Later, Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov said Bach "does not like the toughness of our coaches, but everyone knows that in elite sports, the coach's toughness is key to the students' victories."

The endless Olympic story of unethical behavior by Russian sports officials is casting a shadow over a fifth straight Games in Bach's nine years as president. Many critics of the IOC say Valieva's doping scandal is a direct result of Russia flouting the rules for decades without real punishment from the IOC.

Olympic sports have lived through a decade of Russian doping and cover-ups after the home team was caught cheating at the 2014 Sochi Olympics, a personal project of Putin. Through much of that time, the IOC and Bach made excuses for lighter punishments than expected.

Even in Beijing, Russia is technically banned from its third straight Games, but hundreds of Russian athletes are competing in their traditional colors with "Russian Olympic Committee" uniforms and flags. And they are winning medals — more than any country other than Norway.

The Bach-led IOC has consistently tried to keep Russia in the Games, citing the need to let a new generation of "clean athletes" compete as one reason not to ban Russia outright.

"This lack of leadership perpetuates athletes abuse and exposes the lack of oversight," Rob Koehler of the Global Athlete activist group said Friday.

Global reaction to the Russian teenage skaters' tears after the women's figure skating results seemed to change the IOC's tone. Anna Shcherbakova won gold, Alexandra Trusova won silver, and Valieva stumbled out of the medals into fourth.

Trusova and Valieva sobbed as the scores were read, Trusova talked about retiring at 17 and viewers around the world questioned how youngsters could be put under such pressure.

Athlete mental health and safeguarding young women in sports are key responsibilities for sports bodies, and Bach had to react.

His attack on the entourage did not address the larger culture that has helped Tutberidze flourish, even as her athletes retire in their teens and suffer serious injuries. She is the International Skating Union's coach of the year and the most powerful figure in Russian skating.

Bach also lamented the ruling in Beijing that let Valieva skate, pending the full doping investigation. Over the years, Bach has defended decisions and rulings that allowed Russian athletes continue to compete.

"The IOC always points blame at everyone else and never accepts accountability," Koehler said.

Perhaps the most striking response to Valieva's plight came from Bach's home country of Germany. Katarina Witt, the last woman to win figure skating gold at two different Olympics, was tearful as she commentated on the event.
