Tennessee Downs coming to Shelbyville

By ZOË HAGGARD
zhaggard@t-g.com

Tennessee Downs Auto Club is an elite automobile club track coming to Shelbyville.

It is planned to be located on 185 acres at the corner of U.S. 231 and Eady Road and will consist of a 2.5-mile club track, member clubhouse, auto storage facility, condos, and conference center.

Specifically, the proposal involves several different businesses such as engine manufacturers, upholstery shops, and restoration-type businesses for expensive collector vehicles, not typical mechanic shops for mainstream vehicles.

The project plan says the vision is "to develop a multi-faceted, membership driven complex for the sophisticated automobile enthusiast."

The location was determined based on the proximity to Nashville and Murfreesboro as well as the "significant economic development in area with Nearest Green Distillery

FCB Compliance Department Officer Nicole Guiffra started at First Community 6 months ago, and she said theres been multiple clients who have come to the bank, either to report a scam or withdraw money for one. She said recently one customer lost $12,000, while another lost $20,000.

"It has been a busy couple of months at the bank for me. We have already at least one of each of the three scams I want to talk to you about today," she said.

The most common types of scams are via telephone and internet. "Especially if you have social media, that's how a lot of

"We are excited to be back in Shelbyville for our third consecutive year," said Jackie Hale with the Southern Saddlebred Spring Fling, scheduled Wednesday through Saturday at Calsonic Arena.

The show features the American Saddlebred, Hackney, Roadster and Dutch Harness competitions.

Hale, a resident of Birmingham, Ala., has served as a member of the American Saddlebred Horse Association board of directors. "My role in Alabama's horse world is primarily teaching people to love and care about the Saddlebred and to be a good horseman."

The pandemic initially brought the Southern Saddlebred group to Shelbyville, as its previous arena was closed due to COVID-19. But though COVID seems to be slowly fading here, the group has once again adopted Shelbyville as its spring event site.

"After rescheduling and relocating our Spring Fling show to Shelbyville in June of 2020, trainers and exhibitors liked the

HIGH WINDS SWEEP COUNTY

A barn behind a house owned by Mark Ashley on Highway 130 South was badly damaged by high winds that struck the Shelbyville area around 8 p.m. Wednesday. Part of the barn's metal roof and sides were blown into am adjacent field. The nearby house was undamaged.

A closer look at the Ashley barn.

Most areas of Bedford County suffered little damage beyond downed tree limbs. However, a metal garage was flipped and a swimming pool destroyed at the home of Jesse James on Graydon Street in Shelbyville.

Fencing and other barns were undamaged but one barn's roof was peeled at the Celebration Grounds.

location so well that we've returned," said Hale this week. "Attendees love the fact that this is a 'horse-loving' town and especially enjoy the spectators cheering them on."

Parking and admission for this show is free.

Performance judge this year is Chris Brannan of Nicholasville, Ky., a champion equestrian in his own right. Academy judge will be Jodi Johnson of Upton, Ky. Show manager is Scarlett Mattson.

Today's American Saddlebred

Spectators receive a rare treat with the return of this speciality horse show. The American Saddlebred has been said to "personify the ultimate performer matched with the most personable partner."

They're also beautiful to watch. Saddlebreds typically stand between 15.1 and 16.3 hands in height and can be of any color ranging from black, bay, grey, and chestnut to palomino and pinto.

And the action, Hale says you just can't match it in the performance ring. All American Saddlebreds perform the three standard gaits of walk, trot, and canter.

Scams

these scams work: they get just the tiniest bit of information about you. When they you, they sound like they're legitimate and they may not even know who they're calling," Guiffra said.

Scammers may already know your social security number or your name, which according to Guiffra, makes scammers sound especially legitimate in a small town where typically "everybody knows everybody."

One type of common scam is called the "grandparent scam," where a scammer will call disguised as a person's grandchild, or close relative, and typically ask for money to be bailed out of jail or to help with medical expenses from an accident.

"It's going to be cash or prepaid gift cards," Guiffra said. "And then they're going to say, 'Don't tell mom' or 'Don't tell dad, I need you; I don't want them to be mad at me.'"

"Just remember gift cards are for gifts, not for sending numbers over the phone," Guiffra said.

Guiffra says it's good practice to check with the jail or hospital to see if your "grandchild" is there, or to call that relative and check with him or her.

She also said you can't always trust caller ID as well. "Spoofing" is a common practice where scammers can fake caller ID addresses.

Another common scam is the check scam, where scammers will ask to be mailed several hundred dollars in order for you to receive a large sum of money. But that check comes back and doesn't clear because it's fake, Guiffra explained. "We actually had two of those last week—$19,000," she said.

"But if you put it in your account, and it's no good and we can't recover it, you are going to be responsible for any of that money you sent off," she said. "So always be very cautious of any checks you aren't expecting."

Also, Guiffra added, if you get the scam in the mail, she advises to keep the envelope and bring it to your bank so they can report mail fraud.

"'It's going to be cash or prepaid gift cards. And then they're going to say, 'Don't tell mom' or 'Don't tell dad, I need you; I don't want them to be mad at me.'"

— Compliance Department Officer Nicole Guiffra

Scammers typically target older audiences since the majority of them have money saved up.

The "romance" scam is another common fraud scheme that can typically come through a dating app or even over the phone.

Guiffra retold one instance where a local woman received money from her 401k for house repairs. But she received a call from a supposed "veteran" who needed money to come back home to see his family. She bought prepaid gift cards, which she read to him over the phone, and eventually she gave him her card number. The scammer drained her more than $20,000 of her 401k money.

"We're thinking about that now and think 'who falls for that?' These are your neighbors, people who are just like you and me," Guiffra said.

"Most importantly, if you weren't expecting it, it's not a gift from God, it's not the answer to your prayers. It's probably a scam," Guiffra said.

Lastly, Guiffra said if you are in any way unsure about something to go to your local bank. "We know what your normal behavior is, so if you come and need $10,000, we'll ask a couple questions," she advised the senior crowd.

and Shelbyville Airport." The vehicles' owners will be able to fly in and see their cars' progress.

Essentially, "Tennessee Downs is going to be an exotic car campus," said Shelbyville Bedford Partnership CEO Shane Hooper at Thursday's Chamber Luncheon. "We're happy to have the possibility of that project being here because if any of you have been down to Amelia Island to the car show, that is what Tennessee Downs is attempting to do in the future."

Hooper said when towns bring in these kinds of projects, the people who come with them tend to not have children, so the school system is not flooded, while they also bring a lot of expendable income to spend here.

"It's not enough to just get people here. When people come here, we have to give them something to do while they are here," Hooper said.

According to the project plan, the property was rezoned in September 2021 by the unanimous vote of 17 County Commissioners. The final plan will be coordinated with the planning commission. (contributed by dmelson@t-g.com.)

At a July 2021 planning commission meeting, DHRK Enterprises had requested the rezoning of 185 acres on Eady Road at U.S. 231 for a concrete plant in 2020. They said part of the land will be used as a campus for several automotive-related businesses.

Planning Director Chris White told Bedford County Planning Commission members at the July meeting that the cars will be "very high-end classic and sports cars." The cars' owners were described as "very upscale."

Tourism will benefit as the public will be allowed to see the vehicles being worked on, White said.

Those behind the businesses are extremely wealthy, "legitimate investors," and very serious about the proposed campus, White said. He was told activities would compare to the famous Amelia Island concours events, held in Florida each year celebrating the world's fastest and most expensive cars, as well as the Pebble Beach concours d'elegance.

Other similar club tracks are located throughout the country, to name just a few, include Autobahn Country Club in Illinois, Motorsport Park in New Jersey and Apex Motor Club in Arizona.

Truck driver killed in Bell Buckle-area crash

By DAVID MELSON
dmelson@t-g.com

The name of the victim in a single-vehicle fatal crash last Monday morning east of Bell Buckle has been released.

Milton Hickerson, 75, of Manchester lost his life when he lost control of the 1998 Freightliner tractor truck he was driving eastbound on State Highway 82, the Tennessee Highway Patrol said.

The truck ran off the left shoulder of the road down a ditch, rolled over and came to rest upside down, a preliminary report said.

Deputy hit, burned

An assault suspect who insisted he wasn't going to jail allegedly poured hot coffee on a Bedford County deputy and struck him with the coffee pot.

Billy Colen Stafford, 60, of Sims Road threatened family members, according to an emergency call received Monday night. Sgt. David Burns and Deputy Bradley Gillian of the Bedford County Sheriff's Office were threatened on arrival, their reports said.

Stafford allegedly hit Burns with the full pot of coffee and swung his fists at both deputies; some of the coffee was poured on Burns, causing minor injury.

Charges against Stafford include two counts of aggravated assault on an officer and one count each of domestic assault and resisting arrest.

Stafford could be heard from outside yelling and throwing items as large as a mobility scooter around his home, before deputies entered, the report said.

The report alleges Stafford said he would have stabbed the deputies if he'd had a knife. He was held without bond at Bedford County Jail.

Road rage

A food delivery driver and his wife said they were threatened by another driver Monday night in Normandy.

The driver said as they turned into the Valley View Estates subdivision a man in a charcoal gray Chrysler 200 pulled immediately behind them honking his car's horn and making obscene gestures.

The occupant of the Chrysler was described as a white male with blonde hair and full beard.

The Chrysler pulled alongside the delivery driver and at one point tried to run them off the road, the Bedford County Sheriff's Office report said.

Reusing bath towels

Hints from Heloise

Heloise

Dear Heloise: Recently, you printed a letter from a reader who said it was OK to reuse your bath towels from one day to the next, that there wasn't a chance of infection or bacterial transmission. That couldn't be further from the truth!

I had a relative who also believed this myth. This person would reuse their towels over and over again. Until one day that person got ringworm. This relative went to the doctor, and the doctor advised them that this was pretty common with people who use their towels over and over again.

He explained the misconception and said that leaving your towel on the rack after using it wouldn't make it dry the next day. It will still be moist and a breeding ground for all kinds of germs and bacteria, even a whole day later! The best thing you can do is use a new, clean towel every day.

The ringworm problem was cleared up, and to this day this person doesn't reuse bath towels. Just to be clear, I have never reused bath towels. It was good training in the military, and I always did it anyway. -- Luis Castro, Palmdale, California

SEVERE WEATHER HINT

Dear Heloise: In the winter we have rather severe weather here in the Midwest. If you have to park outside, put plastic bags over the outside mirrors to prevent icing over.

Whenever I fuel up, I always use window cleaner and the squeegee on the front and back windows, the passenger side windows, then the headlights and taillights. Whatever time of day, I have the headlights and taillights on. If nothing else, my vehicle is more visible to other drivers. -- Mel in Indiana

STORING RICE OR BEANS

Dear Heloise: Regarding the suggestion to fill knee socks with uncooked rice or beans: That might be an open invitation to a pantry moth infestation. I've learned the hard way to keep my dry staples in airtight containers. In their larval state, these moths look like tiny black seeds, and will infiltrate grain, pasta, legumes, flour, etc.

Pantry moth infestations are extremely difficult to get rid of, as the larvae hide in cracks and corners. I keep several pantry moth traps in food storage areas, and it's amazing how quickly the sticky surfaces disappear. -- C. Radcliffe, via email

TAKING THE WRONG MEDICATION

Dear Heloise: Laura W. from North Dakota wrote that she takes several medications and sometimes gets confused and takes the wrong one at the wrong time. You suggested she mark the bottles with a frown for nighttime and a smile for daytime meds. I, too, take multiple medications for several conditions, as well as several over-the-counter vitamins. I purchased a pill box with seven individual containers labeled for each day of the week, as well as the time of day that each medication is taken (morning, noon, evening and bedtime). Using this pill box has enabled me to stay on track with taking my medications as prescribed. -- Martha E., Culpeper, Virginia

Dear Readers: Lady's dad and mom, Jim and Terry Piel, drove from New Hampshire to an Ohio shelter to bring Lady home. Once unhealthy and terribly underweight, Lady now enjoys the woods and fields of New Hampshire, the ocean and especially camping.

Sunshine, showers likely for Easter weekend

Steve Norris

Weather

Your Easter weekend is looking partly cloudy with scattered showers possible and maybe a thundershower with high temperatures in the low 70s on Saturday and low 60s on Sunday.

Easter sunrise is 6:11 a.m. and you know the date of Easter varies each year and did you ever wonder why this happens? Easter falls on the first Sunday after the first full moon following the first day of spring, a little complicated but there you go. We will have a full moon this weekend for Easter and it is called the Pink moon.

The line of storms Wednesday night brought wind gusts of 50 to 60 MPH all across Middle Tennessee which blew down trees and caused wind damage in many counties but the good news is that straight line wind was the main thing associated with these storms.

You can drop me an email anytime with requests or questions, weather1@charter.net.

Vickie Hull encountered defeat, but wasn't defeated

Dawn Hankins
Pencil Shavings

You may not control all the events that happen to you, but you can decide not to be reduced by them.
– Maya Angelou

This week I was looking over the COVID count numbers for the county, as I normally do. (We are down to 4 cases, as of last report of April 9.) Then, I saw a Facebook post by John Carney that made me realize that even though the coronavirus was miserable for the community, there's still another evil presence among us. It's called breast cancer.

John's column was about how the community has lost a beautiful soul with Vickie Hull's passing this week. Many may remember her as a loan officer at First Community Bank while others may have been privileged to know her through her community service.

But, no doubt, heaven has gained another angel. If you ever had the privilege to meet her, you likely will agree.

I had the privilege of writing a story about Vickie last year in honor of our October Breast Cancer awareness tab. She was truly an inspiration in her fight with cancer and her positive outlook for life.

I've decided to reprint portions of Vickie's T-G story, simply because I know she would want us to be reminded to continue to fight the fight over Metastatic Breast Cancer.

Vickie's story:

'I still wear pink and will always be a pink supporter, but I also want to spread the word that there is a different layer to breast cancer when it has become stage IV and that awareness and research funds are so desperately needed for Metastatic Breast Cancer.' Vickie Hull, breast cancer patient

"The first time I was told I had breast cancer was in 2008. It was discovered on a routine mammogram. We had just moved into a new home. My oldest daughter had just graduated high school and had just left for college; my youngest daughter was starting kindergarten."

"It felt like someone had punched me. It took a few minutes to even process what they were saying. I was by myself in the room, with my mother waiting in the car."

She had experienced cysts before, she said, so she naturally assumed that condition had returned. "Realizing that I now had to tell my family was worse then the initial shock of finding out myself."

Vickie grew up right in this county; she calls this home. She's been married to her husband, Danny for 24 years; they have three "beautiful" daughters, Meghan, Anna Claire and Tori. Meghan is married to Brad Brown; they have two "most adorable children in the world," Amory and Waylon.

Vickie knows routine checkups are vital. That may include a mammogram and depending on age, every couple of years.

"I have been having routine mammograms since I was 30, due to a cyst that I found during a self examination. I always performed self examinations monthly. Once the breast cancer was diagnosed, I had a bilateral mastectomy with reconstruction and four founds of chemo to make sure that it did not come back."

She was in Stage 1 and her lymph nodes were clear, but she wanted to do as much as possible, she said, to make sure there was no cancer left.

"I was told that I had a 98 percent cure rate for 5 years. What I did not pay attention to was the timeline. I was told by many that once you hit the 5-year mark, you were home free."

Vickie said she found out that was not always the case.

"In 2017, after 9 years of being cancer-free, I felt a twinge in my left breast and during a self-examination, discovered a small lump. I called my oncologist the next morning and she got me in that day. I had surgery to remove the lump and it came back that it was cancer, but was localized and had not spread anywhere else."

"I had 33 rounds of radiation and again, I thought I was good."

In January of 2019, after having some back pain for about a month, Vickie visited a clinic and had an MRI. "When I went for the results . . . just thinking I had maybe a bulging disc. I was told my L3 had compressed and that he was sure that my cancer had returned in this area and I had spots on several other vertebrae."

Vickie said she still considers herself, despite her condition, "a very happy person" and she tries not to get depressed about her health.

"I am blessed and try to live my life to the fullest and plan on being here for many years to come. You just try to get as long as you can from each treatment, before you have to switch to something else, because the cancer has found a way to become resistant to the treatment.

There are new treatments that are being developed and for that, I am truly grateful, but more research is needed."

"I wore lots of pink during the month of October for years, when I thought I had beat it. There is a Metastatic Breast Cancer ribbon that was developed by Metavivor and is green, teal and pink."

She explains the green represents the triumph of spring over winter, life over death and symbolizes renewal, hope and immortality. Teal symbolizes healing and spirituality. The pink ribbon overlay signifies that the cancer originated in the breast.

Thank you, Vickie. You will be greatly missed. We will continue to champion and help others overcome Metastatic Breast Cancer. You will serve as our inspiration.

Early retirement: threat or menace?

Danny Tyree
Tyrades

"But I'll keep workin'/ As long as my two hands are fit to use…"
– Merle Haggard

I haven't run away and joined the circus, but I am nearing the age when a financial safety net admittedly has the allure of the Sirens of Greek mythology.

Yes, before long, yours truly COULD conceivably abandon the rat race and apply for early Social Security benefits.

I would have to adjust to the reduced income very delicately. If I restricted my "riotous" lifestyle any further, it would be SIX FEET UNDER.

But who am I kidding? I am reasonably healthy and hope to stick with my day job for another five to seven years. Why jettison a job you lo…a job you lo…let's be FRIENDS, job!

I'm no quitter. Other than part-time positions, I have never voluntarily left a place of employment. (Or have I? Things are still murky about that stint at Concussions R Us.)

It's not for me to question the judgment of those who do retire at the earliest opportunity. Many make an honest assessment of their genetic predisposition before they accept reduced benefits. ("Gimme the money! Considering Mom's side of the family, there's a 98 percent probability that I will hock up a lung and die at age 64.") Oh, the hijinks that must ensue when you get HALF A DOZEN of these sunshine boys meeting for coffee at McDonald's every morning!

Honestly, I do not begrudge my peers the chance to travel, spoil grandchildren or take up low-impact puttering. More power to them if they have worked hard for decades and choose to "take the money and… hobble."

I simply realize that there's more to retirement than fishing trips and sleeping until noon. Remaining gainfully employed gives you the perfect excuse for dodging endless requests. ("I'd love to straighten that picture frame for you, Ma; but, hey, those pencils aren't going to sharpen themselves!")

When I teased about early retirement, my wife lovingly presented me with a stack of books. Great! A nostalgic feast of lazily re-reading the complete World Book Encyclopedia! No, wait – it's a bound collection of "honey do" lists! ("Hey, boss – any prospects for 25-hour workdays this week?")

Speaking of my wife, I think couples appreciate their "together time" more when most of the week means commuting and laboring. Quality over quantity. Familiarity breeds contempt. There's a fine line between "Precious and few are the moments we two can share" and "Hit the road, Jack, and don't you come back no more no more no more…"

I realize I am just kicking the can down the road, but I am not in a hurry to join the "fixed-income rant" brigade. I don't want to be known for muttering things such as "Back in my day, Fonzie had to ski through five miles of snow before he could jump the shark." No, sirree, Bob! (Oops. Not okay, Boomer.)

Yes, I'll keep on keeping my nose to the grindstone. (Hey, free exfoliation!) I have my inspirations. After thousands of years, the Sirens haven't given up. I just saw one in front of an auto parts store beating up an inflatable dancing tube man for his job.

Ooo! That had to hurt! Hey, I'm suddenly having a flashback to when I got caught raiding the office refrigerator at Concussions R Us. Never saw the fruitcake coming until it was too late!

State Rep. Pat Marsh attended Gov. Bill Lee's visit to Camp Blount in Lincoln County.

Marsh bill will license more truck drivers

Pat Marsh
State Rep. 62nd district

"Take time to deliberate; but when the time for action arrives, stop thinking and go in."
-Andrew Jackson

Governor Bill Lee and First Lady Maria Lee came to Lincoln County last Thursday and visited Camp Blount. There was a large crowd and the weather cleared up and the sun came out just before he arrived. Fayetteville Mayor Michael Whisenant and Lincoln County Mayor Bill Newman had a great program planned.

Dr. Farris Beasley gave a very fact-filled history of the events at Camp Blount back in 1813 where there was a call to action by General Andrew Jackson to fight the Indians and the British. This is where we believe the terms "Tennessee Volunteer" and "Volunteer State" first started and are still true today. The mayors presented Governor Lee with a miniature version of the statue at Camp Blount and everyone had a great time.

I had three bills Monday night on the House Floor and all passed pretty easily. I had HB 2146 - my big bill about replacing the rules and regulations for approving CDL drivers on the Floor Thursday at 9 a.m. It passed the House and is on the calendar for the Senate next week. I really believe this legislation is going to make a big positive step in approving many new drivers and help alleviate some of the supply-chain problems in our nation.

On Tuesday morning at 6:45, I attended the Men of Valor breakfast at the Music City Center. There were over 1,600 attendees and we heard about the good works that the group is providing to men while they are in prison and the help they offer to them when they are released. They are committed to: "winning men in prison to Jesus Christ and discipling them. [Their] goal is to equip them to reenter society as men of integrity — becoming givers to the community rather than takers."

Men of Valor is celebrating their 25th anniversary here in Nashville and soon will be opening their Knoxville branch. They raised over $800,000 in each of the last 2 years over the pandemic. Great organization!

Some of the Tennessee Trucking Association members came by my office Wednesday afternoon for a visit and a Legislative update. Then later on that afternoon, they had a reception at the law offices of Adams and Reese on West End Avenue. After that, our House Republican Caucus had a get together at the Sounds game in North Nashville. Our House Speaker, Cameron Sexton, threw out the first pitch and it was a perfect strike.

I carried and passed legislation to allow the TWRA to invest their funds from Lifetime Sportsman Licenses with the state treasury. They have over $71 million and have been collecting about $100,000 in interest a year. With the change we are making, this should allow them to now earn $4-5 million annually. HB 2129 is on its way to the Governor and I think the funds will be in very good hands under Treasurer Lillard.

The House recently passed a bill to help make sure Tennessee high school students are being taught the benefits of America's founding principles. HB 2742 requires students in grades 9-12 learn about the virtues of capitalism and our constitutional republic form of government as compared to other systems such as communism and socialism. With so much going on in the world, we need to make sure our kids understand the reasons why everyone wants to come to the U.S. for an environment where they can be successful and pursue the American Dream.

The House unanimously approved legislation Thursday that expands who can visit a hospital patient during a time when COVID-19 is a health concern. HB 2665 requires that hospitals allow a patient to have at least one visitor as long as the individual agrees to follow safety protocols established by the facility and the patient isn't in the ICU.

The Transportation committee had their omnibus bills on the Floor this week. In addition to bridge namings, we worked with Linda Williams of Lincoln County to get the section of Highway 431 from the Elk River bridge to the state line designated as a "Gold Star Families Memorial Highway" to honor the families of the courageous men and women who lost their lives in service to this country.

In addition, Beth Davis, of the Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership, along with Scott Johnson and Shane Hooper helped us in getting a specialty license plate named "River Life" to assist Bedford County emergency services with Duck River safety and challenges. The artwork for the plate was designed by local high school students and I look forward to seeing these plates on vehicles around town soon.

On Thursdays, we get out of the Legislature about noon and almost everyone is rushing to get to their cars and head home and get back to their real jobs. This Thursday, I found out right after noon, which was the filing deadline, that I don't have an opponent for this year's election!! That made my day so much more special.

If you ever need assistance, you are welcome to visit me in Suite 610 of the Cordell Hull Building. You can also give me a call at 615-741-6824 or send an email to rep.pat.marsh@capitol.tn.gov. I'm honored to serve as your state representative and want to continue to do my best to serve you well.

Incumbents Graham, Swing, greet potential voters

Mayor Chad Graham's campaign rally recently featured a fish dinner catered by Randy Clanton. Graham talks with some of the election rally guests at the VFW building.

Among those attending the recent Swing for Sheriff rally were members of the law enforcement team at Bedford County Sheriff's Office.

BC Mayor Chad Graham

Bedford County Mayor Chad Graham held a campaign rally Saturday afternoon at the Shelbyville VFW to encourage early voting, which began Wednesday and runs through April 28.

Graham is seeking re-election, focusing his platform on the priorities of education, public safety, and infrastructure.

"If you don't continue to invest in your community and in things that are going to lift the entire system up, then you don't have the resources that are going to assist the people that are struggling," Graham recently told the T-G.

Mayor Chad Graham has also stated during his campaign, "For many years, our county lagged behind surrounding counties in benefiting from regional economic growth. While we certainly want an improved economic environment, we also don't want to sacrifice our quality of life to unbridled growth, traffic congestion and crime. I believe we have the right approach and now is the time to continue building on our recent successes for the sake of future generations and make Bedford County even better."

Specifically, Graham's platform includes recruiting "living" wage jobs, improving schools, maintaining safe neighborhoods and investing in better water, natural gas, sewer and broadband services.

Early voting is currently being held in the annex basement, 100 Public Square West, across the street from the court house. Hours are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday from 8 a.m. to noon.

Sheriff Austin Swing

Austin Swing has spent over 40 years serving the community—first with Shelbyville Police Department as a patrolman.

In 1977, he was named the Jaycees' Outstanding Young Law Enforcement Officer of the Year. Working his way up through the ranks, he was named Shelbyville Chief of Police in 1993. Swing proudly notes that it was under his leadership the police department received its state accreditation.

A life-long resident of Bedford County, Swing is currently serving his second term as sheriff, supervising operations of Bedford County Sheriff's Department. Over 100 county employees operate under his leadership, respectively in Bedford County Corrections, the workhouse, courtrooms/security and schools/resource officers.

Seeking re-election in the May 3 primary, Swing said recently that there's still much to be done from the sheriff's office.

During his campaign, Swing has also stated, "One of the greatest assets as an agency are the men and women who work hard to keep our citizens safe. We patrol an average of 2,000 miles each day. In 2021 alone, there were over 800 drug arrests in Bedford County. We continue the fight state-wide; we are well above the average for crimes cleared. It's an honor and a privilege to serve as your Bedford County sheriff. We will continue to move our department forward and work hard to keep our citizens safe. I humbly ask for your vote May 3rd in the Republican primary."

This Sunday, April 17, marks another Easter Sunday—a holiday that the late Lynne Downs Moore (Winkler) enjoyed.

Lynne loved to celebrate all that's beautiful with others so much that she started delivering balloons out of her home in the early 1980s. She and her then husband, Lanny Moore, bought the flower shop in January of 1984.

"She loved the flower shop and you could say she lived and breathed Flowers For Keeps until she passed in December 2015," said her daughter-in-law, Jenifer Moore, who now co-owns and operates the shop with husband, Chris Moore. "Besides her children and grandchildren, it was her passion for life."

After she passed, Chris wanted to keep his mom's memory alive by continuing the business.

"We have a wonderful staff that do an awesome job, keeping the place running from day to day: Carolyn Travis, Paula Williams, Kris Hill, Frances Beasley, Nancy Ragnoni, John Wheeler, Lanny Moore, and Virginia McKnight," said Jenifer.

The staff also has many kind words for the Moores. "What great people they are to work for," said Paula Williams. "And we all think the world of them. We have never worked for someone as caring as they are about their employees."

That same professionalism and caring earned Flowers for Keeps a BloomNation online marketplace award for 2021. The letter they received from California stated, "Customers on BloomNation love you. Reviews poured in for your shop in 2021 and it become quite obvious that you're one of the best florists in the country."

One review stated, "My friend was thrilled with her flowers. Ordering process was very easy and delivery was on time."

So how do you reach such a pinnacle in the floral business?

Most of the staff at Flowers for Keeps say they learned by "watching and doing." They aren't afraid to admit that they literally started their floral business from the ground up.

"You just look around, jump in and get the work done," advises Jenifer. "Most everyone has delivered, made a bow, cleaned the cooler out, cleaned flowers, watered plants, worked all night on a holiday, answered the phones, wrapped a plant, waited on a customer....and on and on. There is a lot that goes into a flower shop, behind the scenes."

Paula Williams, left, and Jenifer Moore prepare Easter displays at Flowers for Keeps at 813 Union St.

While preparing for Easter weekend, Jenifer reflects on the local, family-owned business. "It is one of those jobs that gets done with a little creativity, a lot of hard work, and a big smile. We try to put our hearts into everything we do. Ms. Carolyn [Travis] says she feels like this is her way to help bring some joy to those who are hurting. And I think we all feel that way too."

Flowers for Keeps offers fresh and silk flowers and gift items. "We have several customers that come in and buy fresh stems right out of the cooler, and we sell silk bushes too," said Jenifer.

Inside the store one might enjoy shopping for fresh vases and baskets for those arrangements. Flowers for Keeps also arranges funeral sprays and cemetery flowers and delivers to hospitals and funeral homes.

Call 931-684-6863 or go to www.flowers4keeps.com or www.facebook.com/flowers4keeps for more information. Store hours are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday hours are 9 a.m., to 2 p.m. Saturdays are 9 a.m. to noon (a little later on holidays.)

Green leaves, but sweet flowers growing

By DAWN HANKINS
dhankins@t-g.com

The modest rose puts forth a thorn, the humble sheep a threatening horn; while the lily white shall in love delight, nor a thorn, nor a threat, stain her beauty bright. English poet William Blake

Beyond its history, the Easter lily has traditional and spiritual meaning. Mentioned many times in the Bible, the lily symbolizes purity, rebirth, new beginnings and hope and is most often associated with the resurrection of Jesus Christ as observed on Easter, which is Sunday, April 17.

Over the years in ministry, I've had the privilege to assign names to a lily in memory or in honor of someone. There's nothing which compares to being in a closed up room working with about 200 potted lilies. Ah-choo!

As a kid I couldn't stand the strong fragrance. But I soon learned the lily's spiritual connection to the Easter season. Now I think there's nothing more beautiful adorning a worship sanctuary.

I've planted them but have never had success with blooms. I gazed at my small garden just the other day. The plants are still just as green, bearing no beautiful white tops.

I've read how I might have them planted too shallow. I've transplanted them. As well, we have had fairly mild winters over the years. That's certainly out of my control!

After all these years, I've begun to have little faith—that I'm doing the right thing to have a beautiful white lily garden. But still, the green plants keep faithfully sprouting up, year after year with the newness of each season.

I remind myself to have faith, because God is capable of making all things happen in His timing. I know in some aspect, my lily garden will happen one day.

Jesus told us in a parable that we only have to have faith the size of a grain of mustard (Matthew 13:31.) No one can see it from the outside, but it is within the believer.

As I reflect on the Easter story from the Bible, I read once again how Jesus appeared to the disciple, Thomas. Find the scripture below. Have a blessed Easter Sunday.

Wanda Payne at Sewanee

Jesus Appears to Thomas

24 One of the twelve disciples, Thomas was not with the others when Jesus came. 25 They told him, "We have seen the Lord!" But he replied, "I won't believe it unless I see the nail wounds in his hands, put my fingers into them, and place my hand into the wound in his side."26 Eight days later the disciples were together again, and this time Thomas was with them. The doors were locked; but suddenly, as before, Jesus was standing among them. "Peace be with you," he said. 27 Then he said to Thomas, "Put your finger here, and look at my hands. Put your hand into the wound in my side. Don't be faithless any longer. Believe!"

28 "My Lord and my God!" Thomas exclaimed. 29 Then Jesus told him, "You believe because you have seen me. Blessed are those who believe without seeing me."30 The disciples saw Jesus do many other miraculous signs in addition to the ones recorded in this book. 31 But these are written so that you may continue to believe that Jesus is the Messiah, the Son of God, and that by believing in him you will have life by the power of his name.

Musings and Memories

I've stood by the side of many graves over the years. Most pastors do at one time or another.

We help other families and loved ones say their final goodbyes.

But then sometimes we are part of the families that are saying farewell.

When I was in the fourth grade, the Dezotell family gathered at my father's graveside, and I remember my 9-year-old heart was broken when we said our farewells.

In 2010 we stood at my mother's graveside in North Dakota as she was laid to rest.

In 2011 we stood at Lynn's father's graveside in Alabama as we said goodbye to him.

And then in a matter of a few years, we stood at Lynn's mother's grave and said farewell.

Several years ago, I stood at the graveside of one of my best friends in Virginia and thought about the song that we all sang at his funeral: "O, when the saints go marchin' in. O, when the saints go marchin' in. O Lord, I want to be in that number, when the saints go marchin' in."

Several years ago, I walked through a pretty and peaceful country cemetery, holding the arm of a grieving widow as we headed to the open grave where her husband was to be laid that one last time.

Several times since then I returned, just looking at the gravestones of people I helped to bury, and others that I didn't have the privilege to meet.

For me, cemeteries are peaceful places. They are usually set aside from the hustle and bustle of life. They are generally a quiet place where loved ones can go and remember and rest and reflect.

Over the years I have seen more and more benches placed near graves for people to stop, sit and pray by the side of their loved-one, gone but not forgotten. I love those benches. I love the memories.

Every time I'd visit my hometown in North Dakota, I would make a trip out to the cemetery to visit my father's grave. The cemetery sits between a busy highway on the north, and a quiet residential neighborhood to the south. It's a peaceful place.

Many times, I've stood under that tree where Dad is buried, and I've thought about the few years we had together.

I was just 9 years old when my father died. I've stood there and told him about my wife and my children that he never got to meet; and I've told him about the ministries that I've been a part of.

My mother is buried under that tree next to my father now. And later this year when I visit Grand Forks I suppose I will go and talk to them both.

Now, I know they are not there in those graves, but it is a nice place to visit, to file through memories, and to pay my respects to the ones who gave me life, and the ones who led me on the path to eternal life.

One unforgettable day in 2017, I was able to stand at the Empty Tomb in Jerusalem, Israel, where Jesus the Christ was laid to rest for just three world-changing-days.

Standing there at the tomb that my Savior vacated on that first Resurrection Morning, watching people, one after another, bow down and go into the empty stone room; all I could think was, "Folks, He is not there! He is Risen!"

No casket, no bones, just an Empty Tomb.

Jesus the Christ has conquered death!

I know my parents have gone on to Heaven to be with Jesus, and I look forward to joining them one day.

There's an old song about the grave that I enjoy singing. It goes like this:

Ain't no grave gonna hold my body down; There ain't no grave gonna hold my body down. When I hear that trumpet sound I'm gonna rise right out of the ground; Ain't no grave gonna hold my body down. Well, look way over yonder, and what do you think I see I see a band of angels and they're coming after me Ain't no grave gonna hold my body down There ain't no grave gonna hold my body down. Well, look down yonder, Gabriel, put your feet on the land and sea; But Gabriel, don't you blow your trumpet, until you hear from me. There ain't no grave gonna hold my body down. Ain't no grave gonna hold my body down. Well meet me, Mother and Father, Meet me down the river road; And Mama, you know that I'll be there when I check in my load Ain't no grave gonna hold my body down. There ain't no grave gonna hold my body down. There ain't no grave gonna hold my body down.

(The original song was penned by Claude Ely in the 1930s.)

The Apostle Paul wrote the following words of encouragement to one of his churches: (1 Thessalonians 4:13-18)… 13 But I do not want you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning those who have fallen asleep, lest you sorrow as others who have no hope. 14 For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so God will bring with Him those who sleep in Jesus. 15 For this we say to you by the word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain until the coming of the Lord will by no means precede those who are asleep. 16 For the Lord Himself will descend from Heaven with a shout, with the voice of an archangel, and with the trumpet of God. And the dead in Christ will rise first. 17 Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. And thus, we shall always be with the Lord. 18 Therefore comfort one another with these words.

I hope you will gather together with others tomorrow morning, Resurrection Sunday, and worship the Risen Lord. He is coming again!

Come, Lord Jesus! Come!

Cancer is a scary word!

Mark McGee
My Take

No one likes to talk about a colonoscopy. Certainly, when you list appropriate dinner table discussion subjects, it would rank at or near the bottom.

The only thing worse for most people than talking about a colonoscopy is preparing for one. The liquid used a couple of days prior to the procedure does not produce an outcome most of us want to deal with. I suggest selecting an enjoyable book before you start.

There are many tests for colorectal cancer, including the home test which features the cartoon shipping box in television commercials. But the best way to determine if your colon is working the way it should and is free of cancerous polyps is a colonoscopy, a procedure that usually requires 30 to 60 minutes. It is relatively painless since you are sedated. Usually, you can go home shortly after you wake up.

The new guidelines for colonoscopies now say you should have your first one at 45. That is much younger than previous recommendations, but younger people are being diagnosed with colorectal cancer at an increasing rate.

I am 20 years past 45. My first colonoscopy went off without a hitch. No polyps. No problems.

Five years later it was a different story. This time around there were two polyps. One was removed that day. The other showed signs of cancer.

Early detection is a key to successful treatment of colorectal cancer. I was taking a blood thinner which produced symptoms in me much sooner than is usually the case. If you are reading this, I hope and pray I am out of the hospital and in the process of recovering from a successful removal of that cancerous polyp.

God has been incredibly good to me through my previous health challenges as many have prayed for me through the years. I am a big believer in prayer, and I know when I went into surgery Tuesday morning prayers were being lifted up for me.

Cancer is a scary word. I didn't expect to hear it ever being directed at me. But my doctor told me the odds are on my side. He is supposed to be the best at what he does so I pray he was accurate in his diagnosis.

Again, let me emphasize the importance of early detection in order to increase the odds of a positive outcome. Listen to your doctor if he tells you, it is time to see a gastroenterologist. Quickly schedule an appointment.

Usually, if you have no signs of colorectal cancer a colonoscopy is recommended every 10 years. Because of my symptoms my second one was scheduled sooner. I am certain my third one will be sooner than a five-year interval.

No one likes to go to a doctor. No one enjoys a colonoscopy. Schedule it for yourself and for your family.

In the words of the Nike ads, "Just do it."

Is there a Mary Magdalene in your life?

Tyrades!
Danny Tyree

If you could be the proverbial "fly on the wall," what Biblical event would you most like to witness?

I realize some of you don't accept the Bible in the first place. But if you do believe it, what scene would you love to see unfold before your eyes?

I imagine most people would go the Cecil B. DeMille route. They would choose something spectacular, such as the Israelites passing through the Red Sea, Noah's ark riding out the Flood or Daniel remaining faithful in the lions' den.

Me? I would love to see the early-morning encounter between Jesus Christ and Mary Magdalene on Resurrection Sunday.

I can think of lots of words to describe the mood of Mary Magdalene and the other friends/followers of Jesus immediately following his arrest, mock trial and crucifixion: blindsided, dejected, disillusioned, heartbroken, anxious, fearful, rudderless…

Two days after the crucifixion, when Mary Magdalene discovered the empty tomb, it was not yet the symbol of hope that has inspired millions of Easter sermons throughout the centuries. The rock rolled away from the tomb left her confused and distraught. She implored the man whom she mistook for the gardener to tell her where her beloved teacher's body had been relocated.

The "gardener" – in an action reminiscent of the Almighty God speaking to the prophet Elijah in a "still small voice" -- needed to utter only one word: "Mary."

Lost pets may wander home after 10 years. Loved ones feared drowned at sea may find refuge on a remote island before achieving contact with civilization. But has there ever been such a transcendent moment in human history as the "late" Jesus of Nazareth revealing himself to one of his inner circle?

Suddenly, Mary Magdalene's earlier negative emotions gave way to relief, elation, comfort, joy and unprecedented zeal.

Is there a Mary Magdalene in your life—someone who needs a little unexpected reassurance and inspiration?

Perhaps there is a friend, relative or business partner whom you haven't spoken to in years because of some long-forgotten disagreement. True, some relationships are beyond repair; but you never know the emotional impact of an olive branch until you try. You may find yourself lifting a dark cloud and making up for lost time.

Are your children or grandchildren enablers of bullies? Instead of letting them cheer the bullies or give tacit approval of the bullies, nudge them to show support for the underdog. Encourage them to defend the new kid in town, the weird kid, the sissy kid. It could be life-changing for an entire classroom.

Are there shut-ins on your street (or in the local nursing home) who face long, dreary days because of physical impairment and the fact that their children live thousands of miles away? Drop in for a chat. Offer to do some chores. Let them know they matter.

Human beings do not have to be rudderless, purposeless and hopeless. They do not have to live lives of quiet desperation -- if someone cares enough to give them a sense of self-worth and brighter tomorrows.

Whether you embrace the Gospel or consider it a fairy tale, the possibilities for uplifting, "out of the blue" attitude adjustments are endless.

Whether you cherish the cross of Calvary or not, you can still be the cavalry riding to the rescue of fellow humans who have given up hope.

STEM grants make classroom 'engaging'

BCLA students give positive response

By ZOË HAGGARD
zhaggard@t-g.com

Bedford County Learning Academy received two computer-related grants from Tennessee Valley Authority in the last week of March. The $3,500 and $2,500 STEM grants are to be used for BCLA teacher Amanda McBride's science and CTE readiness classrooms.

BCLA teacher McBride said they have received $20,000 in similar grants over the past two years.

"This technology allows them to transform what they're doing and making it more applicable to the real world," said McBride. She said many companies have virtual reality meetings or design projects, so it's important students know how to be familiar with the technology.

With the STEM grants, BCLA has been able to purchase several pieces of new technology, including: drones, Oculus headsets, 3-D printers, the Merge Cube, coding robots, crafting kits, Kindle tablets, and live-action dioramas.

"I like to call it 'controlled chaos' because I may have one student 3-D printing, while another has the Oculus on, while another is testing out their robot," McBride said. "But all the technology allows the material to become engaging while still complying with standards."

Many students who attend BCLA don't know what their interests are, according to McBride, but when they have the opportunity to have hands-on learning like this, they start to find being in the classroom engaging. "In a way, it's 'learning by accident,'" McBride said.

"Introducing STEM techniques into core curriculum has created a more engaging and immediately applicable learning experience for my students. The amazing part of utilizing robotics, coding, augmented and virtual reality is that all learners can participate and explore their strengths. It has definitely been a confidence booster in class," said McBride in a recent press release.

McBride said she also applied for another grant with Harbor Freight that would allow them to create a "tranquility garden" behind the school.

According to a recent press release, teachers across TVA's seven-state region applied for funding of up to $5,000 for projects, and 233 applications were selected.

Schools awarded grants must receive their power from a local power company served by TVA. Bedford County Learning Academy is served by Shelbyville Power, Water, and Sewerage Systems.

"We are excited to have this funding to support hands-on activities and programs that help students develop skills that can apply to real-world problem solving," said Bedford County Superintendent of Schools Tammy Garrett in the press release. "We want to open doors to high quality, rewarding jobs for our students, and the grant will help us introduce them to these subjects from a young age."

Viqueens win in pairing of county rivals

Thursday afternoon's county clash between the Cascade Lady Champions and Communty Viqueens saw the Purple and Gold belt out 12 hits against the Lady Champs and rally for a huge, 9-3 win in District 7-AA.

It was Cascade who struck the first blow in the bottom of the second inning.

After starting pitcher Brianna Horn danced around trouble in the first inning and left a pair of Viqueens stranded on base, Community threatened again in the second frame and put a pair of runners on base with a single and a hit-by-pitch.

After once again leaving two on base, Cascade's Emma Thompson reached on a Viqueen throwing error and scurried around the bases to third.

With a runner in scoring position, Hannah Vandriver smashed a two-run blast to centerfield, putting Cascade up 2-0 at the end of the second.

Community answered with a three-run third inning, jumpstarted by a lead off single by Carlie Blanton.

Blanton scored Community's first run on a single by Chloe West and Haley Mitchell smashed a 2 RBI double to put the Viqueens up 3-2.

Cascade knotted the game at three runs apiece in the bottom of the fourth when Claire Perry ground into a fielder's choice, scoring Vandriver from third.

While Cascade continually found answers at the plate through the first four innings, Community closed the game by scoring six unanswered runs in the fifth and sixth innings.

Emma Bentley safely reached in the fifth on a Cascade error and worked her way around the bags to third.

She scored on a sac-fly by West to put Community up 4-3.

Mitchell added to her 4-for-4 night with a RBI single to plate the second run of the inning and bump the Viqueen lead to 5-3.

Community plated four more runs in the sixth inning, highlighted by a RBI triple off Mitchell's bat.

She led the Viqueens with a 4-for-4 night, just a home run shy of hitting for the cycle.

She drove in four Viqueen runs.

Carlie Blanton and Abigail Brown both accounted for a pair of base hits.

Cascade managed just three hits off Viqueen pitching, with Vandriver connecting on a two-run homer and a double.

Alivia Fannin singled in the seventh inning as well.

Senior Hailey Farrar got the start for Community and pitched two innings before Taylar Wessner took over and pitched the final five frames.

Farrar gave up just one hit and allowed two runs while striking out two.

Wessner was tagged for a pair of hits and allowed just one run to cross the plate, while striking out three.

Horn went the distance for Cascade and while Community connected on 12 hits, Horn struck out eight Viqueen batters.

Community will step out of district play on Monday and host Hickman County at 5 p.m., while Cascade will travel to Grundy County on Tuesday, before both Bedford County squads meet again in Unionville on Thursday for Game 2 in the series.

Norris a 2-way threat for Vikes vs. Champs

By CHRIS SIERS

Dylan Norris delivered in a big way during Monday night's county clash between Cascade and Community.

Norris not only got the win on the mound, he was the biggest run producer for the Vikings in Community's 12-7 win over the Champs.

Norris pitched 4 1/3 innings, allowing just three runs on two hits while striking out 12 batters.

He also went 4-for-5 with two home runs and four RBIs.

In the early goings, it looked like the game might turn into a Viking blowout, as Community plated three runs in the first two innings, including Norris' solo homer in the top of the first inning.

But just two batters into the game, storms rolled in and forced a 43-minute rain delay.

With Community up 1-0, starting Cascade pitcher Tyler Knight resumed on the mound and recorded the next two outs of the inning to end the early threat.

In the second, Gage Underwood doubled to center to lead off and then scored when Drew Harris crushed a two-run blast to left, bumping the Viking lead to 3-0.

Cascade went on to load the bases in the bottom of the third inning after a pair of Viking errors.

With the top of the lineup due at the plate with two outs, it was Norris who delivered a key strikeout to leave the bases loaded for Cascade.

Community played add on in the top of the fourth via the long ball again off the bat of Norris.

With two on and two out, Norris smacked his second dinger of the night to center field, plating three more runs and giving the Vikings a 6-0 lead.

Cascade was able to get one run back in the bottom half of the inning when Hunter Lemmons scored on a Viking error.

The Vikings answered in the fifth as the game turned into a seesaw affair, with Blaine Paschal connecting on a RBI single.

While the Vikings had been steadily able to plate runs through the first five innings, it was Cascade's chance with a big inning in the fifth.

After struggling to connect off Norris through the first four innings, a one-out double by Walker Craig put runners at second and third.

With Cascade threatening with runners in scoring position, Corey Paterick took over on the mound and in the first at-bat, it was a RBI single to left by Kobe Inmon that sparked the four-run rally.

Walker Craig watches his double reach the center field fence in the bottom of the fifth inning.

Shortstop Chance Brown fields a softly hit ball and fires the throw to first for the out.

Caden Hammonds then scored on a Viking error, making the score 7-3.

After Paschal answered with a strikeout, a bloop single to left by Jake Bates loaded the bases for Cascade, bringing Hunter Lemmons to the plate.

Lemmons connected on a two-bagger and drove in two more runs, pulling Cascade within two runs.

While Cascade had orchestrated its four-run fifth inning, Community responded with a four-run sixth inning.

With two outs and the bases loaded, a Cascade error at first base allowed two more Community runs to score.

Sam Holley and Paschal added to the lead with a RBI single and RBI double, respectively.

The Vikings got one final run in the seventh inning on a RBI fielder's choice by Mason Russell before Cascade was able to scrounge up a pair of runs in the bottom of the seventh.

With two outs, Chance Brown doubled to center field and Conner Melson singled to left to score Cascade's seventh run of the night.

Even with the late-game surge, Community was able to come up with the final out and end the Cascade rally in the seventh.

Norris' night was the highlight for the Purple and Gold, while Underwood, Harris, Holley and Paschal all connected for two-hit nights.

Community pitchers combined for 17 strikeouts against the Champions.

For Cascade, Walker Craig had the best night at the plate, going 2-for-5.

Game 2 of the series was scheduled for Tuesday night, but was rained out and rescheduled for Friday afternoon.

Results from Friday afternoon's rematch were unavailable by press time.

Saban: State of college football not 'sustainable'

By RALPH D. RUSSO
AP College Football Writer

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Nick Saban's willingness to adapt and often be a catalyst for change in college football, both on the field and off, has propelled Alabama to six national championships in 13 seasons.

The 70-year-old coach is confident his program will continue to thrive during this new era of college athletics, with players having more opportunities to earn money than ever before and more power to determine where they play.

But the current state of college football has Saban concerned.

"I don't think what we're doing right now is a sustainable model," Saban told The Associated Press in a recent interview.

That's a common theme among coaches these days, with Clemson's Dabo Swinney and Southern California's Lincoln Riley among the most prominent who have echoed Saban's sentiments. The combination of empowered athletes and easily accessible paydays is changing the way coaches go about their business.

The uncertainty comes with the NCAA in a weakened state following last year's Supreme Court loss and in the midst of a dramatic restructuring. Schools and the NCAA itself would prefer federal legislation to regulate how athletes are compensated for their names, images and likenesses, but when that might come and in what form is unknown.

That has led to concerns about vast sums of money flowing in and around college athletics, including brazen entities called collectives put together by well-heeled donors whose donations have traditionally funded everything from lavish facilities to multimillion-dollar buyouts of fired coaches around Power Five conferences.

"The concept of name, image and likeness was for players to be able to use their name, image and likeness to create opportunities for themselves. That's what it was," Saban said. "So last year on our team, our guys probably made as much or more than anybody in the country."

Paying a player to attend a particular school is still a violation of NCAA rules, but NIL deals have quickly become intertwined with recruiting — both high school prospects and the growing number of college transfers.

"But that creates a situation where you can basically buy players," Saban said. "You can do it in recruiting. I mean, if that's what we want college football to be, I don't know. And you can also get players to get in the transfer portal to see if they can get more someplace else than they can get at your place."

Riley told reporters last week NIL has "completely changed" recruiting.

"I think that anybody that cares about college football is not real pleased with that because that wasn't the intention," said Riley, who is in his first season at Southern California after five years at Oklahoma. "And I'm sure, at some point, there is going to be a market correction if you will, with recruiting."

What exactly is going on with recruiting and NIL is hard to know for sure because it is mostly happening outside the purview of schools and the NCAA between parties with no obligation to publicly disclose deals.

A NIL contract drawn up for an unidentified blue-chip recruit reportedly could be worth up to $8 million. Earlier this year, Texas A&M coach Jimbo Fisher was angered by rumors the Aggies used millions in NIL money to sign the nation's consensus No. 1 recruiting class for 2022.

Mississippi coach Lane Kiffin is among those who worry about conflicts in recruiting between coaches and emboldened boosters,

"I think that there's going to start being issues potentially of donors and collective groups saying they want Player A from their area. And the coaching staff wants Player B," Kiffin told AP.

Swinney told ESPN major college football needs a "complete blowup" that might result in something that looks more like professional football.

"I think you'll have 40 or 50 teams and a commissioner and here are the rules," he said.

Saban said he is not against the shift toward players being compensated and given more freedom to switch teams.

"We now have an NFL model with no contracts, but everybody has free agency," said Saban, echoing a comparison Kiffin has made.

"It's fine for players to get money. I'm all for that. I'm not against that. But there also has to be some responsibility on both ends, which you could call a contract. So that you have an opportunity to develop people in a way that's going to help them be successful," Saban said.

Central tennis teams score wins

By CHRIS SIERS

It was a strong showing for the Shelbyville Central tennis teams on Tuesday afternoon, claiming a pair of wins against visiting Franklin County.

The Eagles took the 5-2 team victory, while the Eaglettes claimed a 7-0 sweep.

In singles, Justin Spence took an 8-3 victory, while Zacari Draine and Hoyt Wessner each won an 8-4 decision.

Addison Wilson claimed an 8-2 win at the No. 4 spot, while No. 1 Jackson Benson fought, but came up on the short end of a 9-7 decision.

The Eagles split doubles matches, with Wessner and Drain claiming an 8-5 No. 2 victory, while Benson and Spence came up short in an 8-6 final score.

For the Eaglettes, it was nothing short of a dominating performance against the Rebellettes.

In singles, Ainsley Noel, Vivian Fernandez and Rachel Phillips all posted 8-0 victories, while Caitlyn Burdick took an 8-4 win.

No. 4 Emma Habel also was dominant in an 8-1 decision.

Noel and Burdick powered their way to a doubles victory in an 8-3 final score at the No. 1 spot, while Fernandez and Habel took an 8-0 win at the No. 2 spot.

Both teams will be back in action on Monday afternoon at H.V. Griffin Park at 4 p.m. as Shelbyville hosts Lawrence County.

Solis' hat trick powers Eagles' 3-2 win

A strong performance in the second half led the way as Shelbyville Central claimed a 3-2 win in a hard fought battle over visiting Coffee County in a district match on Tuesday night.

Edgar Solis finished with a hat trick to score all three goals for the Eagles (5-5, 3-0).

"We made a mistake at the beginning of the game to give them an early lead. We bounced back from that before half time with a shot from Edgar Solis assisted by Emmanuel Leyva," Shelbyville Central coach Chris Fritz said. "After halftime, they scored another goal when our defense became disorganized. Daniel Juarez assisted another goal for Edgar Solis to tie it back up."

"Edgar scored one more goal before the end of the half to seal the win. We have to grow defensively and learn to prevent the little mistakes. Coffee came in eager to win and we struggled to apply pressure at times. I am proud of how our boys are learning to overcome the adversity in games by remaining calm."

MLB average salary up 5.9% after lockout

By RONALD BLUM
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — The average salary in the major leagues rebounded to $4.4 million on opening day, boosted by a frenzy of free agent signings before and after the 99-day lockout, according to a study of baseball contracts by The Associated Press.

New York Mets pitcher Max Scherzer set a season record at $43.3 million, topping the previous mark established last year by Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Trevor Bauer at $38 million. Scherzer earns more than all the current players on the Baltimore Orioles combined.

The average of $4,414,184 was up 5.9% from the $4,167,164 at the start of last season and just below the record of $4,451,508 set in 2017, before the salary slide that angered players during the labor contract that expired last December.

Major League Baseball projects opening-day payrolls at about $4.5 billion, up almost 10% from the previous high of approximately $4.1 billion.

This year's average would have been higher had active rosters not been expanded from 26 to 28 through May 1 following the shortened spring training. Factoring out the added players who are at the $700,000 minimum or close to it, the average would have been a record $4.62 million.

In addition, this year's final average will be boosted by the new labor contract's $50 million bonus pool for lower-salaried players not yet eligible for arbitration. Adding that figure and dropping the added 60 players, the average would be $4.68 million.

The average salary declines over the course of a season as higher-paid veterans are released and replaced by lower-salaried players.

The Los Angeles Dodgers top the major leagues at nearly $285 million, up from $241 million at the start of last season.

The Mets are second at $266 million in their second season under owner Steven Cohen, up from $186 million last year and $154 million in 2019, the last full season under the Wilpon and Katz families.

The New York Yankees are third at just under $237 million, followed by Philadelphia ($224 million) and San Diego and Boston ($212 million each).

World Series champion Atlanta is eighth at $184 million, and AL champion Houston is 10th at $174 million.

Oakland, which traded several stars after the lockout, is last at $48 million, down from $83 million last opening day and the Athletics' lowest for a full season since 2008.

Other low payrolls are Baltimore ($58 million), Cleveland ($60 million), Pittsburgh ($62 million), and Miami (just under $80 million).

The Orioles totaled $38 million for their current players, with just over $20 million going toward the final season of the seven-year contract of first baseman Chris Davis, who retired after years of injuries and three straight sub-.200 batting averages.

Scherzer was followed at the top of the salary list by Angels outfielder Mike Trout at $37.1 million, Angels third baseman Anthony Rendon at $36.6 million, Yankees pitcher Gerrit Cole at $36 million. Minnesota shortstop Carlos Correa at $35.1 million and San Diego third baseman Manny Machado at $34 million.

Thirteen players earn $30 million or more, 48 earn at least $20 million and 133 at least $10 million. More than half the players, 514, earn at least $1 million.

After several years of widening, payroll disparity among players decreased slightly.

The 50 highest-paid players are getting 30.3% of salaries, down from 33.4% at the start of last season but still above the 28.6% in 2017. The 100 highest-paid are receiving 48.9%, down from 52.4% last year but above the 42.5% in 2017.

Of 975 players on opening day active rosters, injured lists, the restricted list and the bereavement list, 461 (47%) had salaries under $1 million, up from 46% last year. The minimum was raised from $570,500 to $700,000; 57 earned the minimum and 375 were below $730,000.

The median salary — the point at which an equal number of players are above and below — rose by $50,000 to $1.2 million, down from $1.4 million in 2019 and well below the $1.65 million record high at the start of 2015.

New USFL tests spring sports waters

By JOE REEDY
AP Sports Writer

NBC Sports president Jon Miller knows the perils of starting a spring football league. He was with NBC when the network teamed with Vince McMahon and World Wrestling Entertainment during the XFL's first launch in 2001 and has seen other leagues crash and burn.

Miller is optimistic that a new version of the USFL could have some staying power.

"Hopefully, the fifth time is a charm. I think the timing is right, the partnership is right, and the model is bred for success," Miller said. "We're optimistic, hopeful, and excited at the same time."

The USFL kicks off Saturday night in Birmingham, Alabama, when the New Jersey Generals face the Birmingham Stallions.

Fox and NBC Sports will each carry 22 games, including Saturday's opener. It is the first time since the 2007 regular-season finale between the New England Patriots and New York Giants that a game will air on multiple broadcast networks.

Fox Sports owns the USFL and is making a $150 million investment over three years. The only similarity between the USFL of 1983-85 and this one is the team names.

Fox Sports executive vice president Michael Mulvihill thinks the XFL would have made it if it wasn't for the coronavirus pandemic. The league suspended operations in April 2020 during the pandemic. It played five weeks before COVID-19 halted sports a month earlier.

In 2019, the Alliance of American Football shut down after eight weeks after running out of money.

"I think the viewership figures for spring football are good enough to give us a high level of confidence that the interest among fans is there," Mulvihill said. "It just becomes a matter of can we develop a business model that's more effective than the leagues that have tried and haven't succeeded. Because we're structured the way we are, we have a pretty good chance of doing just that."

There are two significant differences with the USFL before it kicks off. It has waited until April to begin the season. The XFL and AAF immediately started their seasons after the Super Bowl and eventually had to go against the NCAA basketball tournament and the Masters.

The USFL's most significant competition for viewers will be the NBA and NHL playoffs through the end of May. The XFL averaged 1.5 million viewers on Fox and ABC during its final week of games while AAF ratings for games on NFL Network were similar to preseason NFL games.

The other difference is that the season will take place in two cities. The regular season will occur in Birmingham, with the playoffs slated for the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio.

"It's beneficial for us to get on solid financial footing and then year two start to kind of dial it in. Our goal is year two. Nobody's done that in a while," said former Dallas Cowboys standout and Fox NFL commentator Daryl Johnston, the USFL's executive vice president of football operations.

Johnston also had front-office roles in the XFL and AAF. Brian Woods, the founder The Spring League, is the USFL's president of football operations, while Fox NFL and college football rules analyst Mike Pereira will act as the head of officiating.

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
